The battery of anti-aircraft guns on the Italian battleship above are ready for any of the Austrian airmen who occasionally raid the Adriatic coast. Central News.

A handy stream and a cake of soap, and the poilu is his own launderer. Rather the other fellow's laundryman, for one soldier scrubs while another swims on the Marne front in France. Pictorial Press.

Heavy guns mounted on railroad cars are being rapidly developed by the Allies. On the right are several French long range guns firing while the cars are climbing a mountain in Alsace. Underwood & Underwood.

Scores of rolling kitchens that provide "chow" for hungry poilus parked somewhere on the Western Front. French Official from Pict. Press.

Not quite so comfortable as a Long Island bungalow, but these French troops on the Marne front find it a real home after the trenches. French Official from Pict. Press.

A French soldier on the Marne front is sorting out thousands of saddles and sets of harness that have been gathered from many battlefields. French Official from Pict. Press.

Mlle. Gina Palerme bowls on the beautiful green of the Paddington Bowling Club to entertain wounded British and Colonial Tommies. The Paddington bowlers have cheered up several thousand wounded during the past two years. Pictorial Press.