Consolidated Building

HABS No. SC- 614

Location: 1326-30 Main Street, in Columbia, Richland County, South Carolina

Date of Construction: 1912

Architect: J. Carroll Johnson (an architect with the firm of Wilson and Sompayrac. He later became a principal architect in the firm of Urquhart and Johnson, who also designed other notable buildings in Columbia, including Eau Claire Town Hall and Columbia High School).

Present Use: Commercial

Significance: The Consolidated Building has an intricately detailed glazed and colored terra cotta facade that is unique in Columbia, South Carolina. It is constructed of polychrome terra cotta and has a cartouche containing the date of construction above the central window. On the far sides of the building are colonettes with a geometrical design. An elaborate decorative frieze features fleur-de-lis motif with overhanging section with trefoils. The parapet contains the word "Consolidated" and has pierced quatrefoils.

The awnings and balcony over the central doorway were removed and Jackson Camera Center occupies the right storefront.

Consolidated Building is listed in the National Register of Historic Places
