Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1863, by L. Prang & Co. in Clerk's office of the District Court of Massachusetts.
There was a lonely cabin
Within a dark, old wood;
And in it, with her mother
There dwell Red Riding Hood.

The tall old trees above them
Their winter fire supplied;
When Autumn’s flaming sunsets
From their red leaves had died.
The rippling brook; their water
From far off mountains brought;
And prattled of their summits
In icy statues wrought.

For them, the squirrels hoarded
Their nuts in hollow trees;
And pounds of sweetest honey
Wore made them by the bees;
To gather these together
Was work enough to do;
Little Red Riding Hood thought so,
And so no doubt, would you.

Blushing beneath her fingers
Looked up the berries red;
The flowers seemed to know her
And listened for her tread.
This little pot of butter
I've churned so nice and sweet;
And mind not stop and prattle
With any one you meet!"

Then through the shady forest
The little maiden went;
And though her steps were fleetest,
The day was well nigh spent.
When nearly through her journey,
An old, gaunt Wolf she spied,
Who wagged his tail, and humbly
Came walking by her side;

And said, "My little maiden,
How very fair you are!
You really look quite handsome!
Where do you walk so far?"
Forgetful of her mother,
She stopped and told him where;
Then said the Wolf, so cunning,
"What is it that you bear?"

Forgetful of her mother,
She stood and told him what;
"Tis butter, for my grandma,
Packed nicely in this pot."
Then said the Wolf, "good bye dear;
Perhaps we'll meet again!"
Then swiftly on he hastened;
Swiftly through dale and glen;

And running reached before her
The cabin grey and old;
Her grandmamma was absent—
He quickly did infold.
Himself in cap and night gown,
Then quickly on the bed,
Closely upon the pillow
He laid his grizzly head:

Red Riding Hood soon entered;
"O, grandmamma, see here!
A little pot of butter!"
Where is my grandma dear
Take off your clothes my darling,
When you are here decide me
Upon the bed come lie
I'll be better by and by

'Here, said the Wolf, wellington,
My grandmama's voice so weak,
I'm here so said my darling
That I am scaredly speed.'
Red Riding Hood obeyed her grandmother's behest:

"A what GREAT EYES my grandmama!"

They never looked so before: "Thats to see you better my darling!"

"The leaver to see you more!"

"And got upon the bed:"

You are the quickest said.
"What a GREAT MAN'S my grandma!"
"And what GREAT HARDS my grandmas!"
"They never looked so bonny!"
"That's to smell you better than ever!"
"And to hug you more and more!"

The letter is small, you know.
What a GREAT MOUTH my grandmaw
As large as your tin cup!"
"That's to open wide my beauty
And then to eat you up!"

Then he opened his great mouth wider
To eat her like a bird
But at the dreadful moment
A hunter's gun was heard
The Wolf fell dead and bleeding—
Then grandma hastened in—
For she had seen the peril
The danger that had been!

Red Riding Hood wept sadly
And sorrowed more and more,
That she'd disobeyed her mother—
Which she never did before.
And she thought with fear & trembling
Of the death that came so near!
And she said the fright had taught her
To mind her mother dear.

Then listen, all ye children,
And mind your mother's words:
For the great WOLF men call EVIL
Is prowling round unheard!
