

Response to the Static Control comment:

The U.S. Copyright Office should be used as an substitute yet uber-patent office.

By adding any sort trivial addition to a mechanical device to lay a DMCA claim, one can create in effect a de facto patent protection a commercial device, but with a much longer term, and with a free ride of enforcement by the U.S. Government. This is clearly not what Copyrights are intended to protect.

James Joseph Wagner, President
Hypertouch® Inc.

235 Belmont Ave

Redwood City, CA 94061-3758

Web: <http://www.hypertouch.com>

Voice/FAX: (650) 367 - 6664