

I propose that no law be passed, nor any restriction or regulation enacted, that reduces in any way the right of the American people to fair use of copyrighted works as defined in Section 107 of the United States Copyright Act.

Furthermore, I propose that the right of the American people to make an unlimited number of copies of any copyrighted work that they legally have access to (e.g. broadcast analog radio, broadcast television, cable television, digital radio for which they have a valid subscription) for personal use never be infringed upon by any means. I further propose that the prohibition upon the infringement of these rights be enacted into law. As it would then be illegal to infringe upon these rights, no particular classes of works need be exempted from any future legislation.
