

To whomever it may concern,

Jailbreaking is not an illegal act. Many developers really on people buying their add-ons and tweaks for a living. It is their career. I believe that you should have the freedom to do whatever you like with something you have bought, especially with the price some companies charge. A lot of companies integrate the tweaks that developers have created before that update is published and making jailbreaking illegal would stop a lot of innovation and creativeness.

This is in reply to works number 1201 of the DMCA.

Yours Faithfully,

Adam Fairfield