

I really don't understand why "jailbreaking" a device which I own and paid for would be considered illegal in the first place. If I want to erase it and use it as a paperweight, I should be allowed to do with it as I please.

There are a lot of features that Apple either forgot or hasn't thought of yet. Why is it illegal for me to add them?

I do not modify their code and resell it.

I do not jailbreak in order to steal software.

I jailbreak to enhance my device.

Stop government overreach and leave this issue alone. Keep the sanctions in place and don't add any more. Copyrights are great. I don't deny Apple the right to the theirs, but once I've paid them HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS, the product is MINE, not THEIRS and certainly not YOURS!

Sincerely, Bill Dawson
