

Hello, my name is Christian White, a 14 year old from Louisiana. I learned about this cause through tysiphonehelp on YouTube and agreed with what he said. I think that jailbreaking (I speak on behalf of my iPod touch 3G, 4G, and iPhone 4S) should be legal. It gives the people who use a product the chance to personalize it into a form which we find appropriately suited to ourselves, rather than the company that produced it's idea of the customization style. If I want a 5x5 springboard, or an infinite dock, why should a company get to choose whether that is possible, rather than giving us, the people that are buying the products, the chance to choose for themselves.
