

Whether a consumer or organization purchases a smartphone or similar device, they have the right to make needed changes to meet their need as long as it does not infringe on the rights or well being of others. Innovation and science, both critical for increasing knowledge as well as our economy need the freedom to innovate and meet needs not always initially delivered by a device as released.