

I'm dumping my smart phone because I can't uninstall the apps I don't want, and install the apps I like. The market demand is for phones that will not subordinate the interests of the device owner/user/lessee to the interests of the manufacturer, software makers, or others. Jail breaking is really just the restoration of the property rights of the device owner/user. The only true meeting of the minds relates to the price for the service rendered or product that was purchased.
