It is our right to have the freedom to install applications that we create into our own devices. As a software developer (not professional) I think that having my phone unlocked is my basic right as a consumer, and given that the device is my property, both hardware and software, I should be restricted to interfere in any way with my property. Furthermore, having the right to change sim cards on my mobile phone with other providers, it is my right since the phone is my property.

Thank you
