

Simply put, the owner of any consumer electronic device should have the right to do with it as they please. If the owner accepts that said product's manufacturer refuses to service a device that has been tampered with it is his/her decision to do so and to accept these conditions.