

Keep Jailbreaking Legal

I strongly believe that jailbreaking should be kept legal. The main reason is we pay for our devices. They are ours, and we should be able to do what we like with them (as long as we don't use it for piracy). If the companies that offer these devices must "control" the way we use them, I think they should offer the support for them. Take apple for example, after a short period of owning the device you must pay for tech support. Through the jailbreaking community they offer consistent support. Also I would like to point out that because of the jailbreaking community apple has adopted some of the modifications. This alone says that they are constantly moving forward, and making the devices better.
