

I'm commenting to support the EFF's petition to keep jailbreaking legal. I am a software developer and I always play with devices and software to see what can be done better by software that can only be enabled on jailbroken devices. I strongly believe it forces companies to keep innovating to make their software and products better and is an important, community-driven aspect of market competition.