Dear Bernadette,

Thank you for your helpful letter. We are mailing out our first two letters of protest to day. The present amounts appropriated are so small, relatively, that they can hardly be found in the multi-billions budget.

I know that heroic methods are needed to stave off the advancing inflation which could ruin nearly every body, but a 50% cut makes no sense.

Best to you all

As ever,

Arlan

DEAR BERNADETTE –

As you see you must continue to suffer my block printing. Bev is "on" the typewriter – playing it like a piano. She recently met with her adviser whose "advice" consists of capriciously demanding three revisions minimum of every chapter, treating Bev like a naughty child ("You will thank me some day for this!") or being just plain rude. This interview left Bev grinding her teeth, angry near tears and determined to finish the thing by May 1st she knows this might not happen, but also knows she can get her course work done by May even if she must wait until the fall to graduate. Such is the life of a graduate student.

It seems to me a very good thing to be doing the work you're doing at the Poetry Project especially now. Good for you and good for poetry. I increasingly feel I want to throw myself into something, be absorbed in some act as a way to combat the demoralization I sense around me & my own falling spirits as I read the paper each morning. Teaching helps, but at Harvard my work is confined to the classrooms & individual conferences. I do not have much contact with the students – this is the situation in general – little sense of community exists. Of course there is my work, but at the moment I have an itch to do something less personal, more involved with "the world" wherever that is or perhaps what I must do is push my work to absorb that which is out there & in me. Given this state the Project seems, from here, an ideal focus which is not to say that it satisfies in every way. I seem to want something to do that gives me the feeling of control in the sense of knowing what is going on. Reaganomics, the return to a foreign policy (return? Making public what had been kept mostly private these last few years!) based on greed & terror & smug patriotism makes me feel stupid. Stupid in the sense that it doesn't seem to matter if I understand what's going on. I can't seem to know enough to do anything but sit and watch. I find friends here either ignoring what is happening or shaking their heads in a what-did-you-expect daze or talking in a near panic as a lawyer friend did the other night about home heating oil prices doubling next winter and moving to the sunbelt — at that point laughter encourages at least partial sanity. I wonder if all this is why the scourge of flu sickness in New York — sensitive households bringing home what it is in the air? For us this is compounded by $1,200 in property taxes owed since November + going up daily at 14% interest. We're trying to save $200 a month to pay them but then there are May's taxes — Woe is us! Enough of that.

Actually we all are more cheerful than the above suggests. Ben will soon apply for a two year program at Mass. General involving seminars + intensive supervision. If she gets in she'll leave the clinic + be paid the same salary at Mass General. Since the fall she has felt the need to know more, to work out of more than instinct.

Marni is busy not to say preoccupied being a

28 FEB (A WEEK TO GET BACK TO THIS XO?X!#!XX!!!)

Teenager - independent and very graceful about it and, for the most part, gracious to all of us who at times stumble into her way. Well, she has not taken on "queenly" airs but she is in charge of her life. She even disdains babysitting jobs which Arden rushes to fill. Arden is aggressive when it comes to baby sitting - she talked herself into a twice weekly afternoon job & is now out one night a week at the least. She likes to walk around with a fistful of $1.'s counting her money.

Beautiful blue + sunny morning today - only the second in a week. Read the "blue" parts of this letter with rain in mind. I react to the weather like a barometer, a mad barometer - like the "moody Hungarian" my father was to very mother and, as grandmother said, "the apple does not fall far from the tree."

No! The latest Newsletter failed to reach us. When I enter the void I expect to have to sweep aside stacks of newsletters. I wish our property tax bills (this is still on my mind) would wind up there. But I surprise myself - money worries have always spooked me - this time I'm not so pestered. Something will happen! But neither am I paralyzed (money worries has had that effect on me.) What I'll probably do is teach summer school at Harvard. What are your plans for the summer - still New Hampshire? Russell called Wed. to chat & Thursday he flew down to Miss. and Today is in New Orleans at Mardi Gras.

Do you hear from Clark? I've not had word since "Goodnight" in the cab going uptown after the Boston reading. I did send him Montpelier Biscuit, but few ever respond to books and are friends ought to be allowed a waiver.

Can you send me the address of the Phoenix Bookshop, Books & Co. and any other bookstores that might carry my books? These addresses are for my English publisher. I can't find — there must be one — a New York telephone book in this town. Is there any store on the lower east side he should contact? The publisher here who is doing Runaway Pond — "My" publisher — seems to have forgotten about me. He has a case of "don't call us we'll call you — isn't the promise to publish a book of poems enough." Poetry needs its own Amy Vanderbilt — but she would need a hickory stick — to teach manners.

When will you come up to read at M.I.T.? We expect all Warsl-Mayers to be here in crocus time. Your "Bus" poem in recent UA is very good! And the sonnets. All Loeb Classical series easily available here — just let me know. Now I can get this off to you.

Authors' Series to Begin Feb. 16

BY C. GERALD FRASER

Norman Mailer, Tom Wolfe, Joyce Carol Oates, William Styron and Susan Sontag, reading from old and new works and answering questions from the audience, will open the first season of a series of literary programs sponsored by the newly founded National Committee for the Literary Arts at Lincoln Center.

Patricia Kennedy Lawford, committee chairman, announced yesterday that Mr. Mailer would lead off the series on Feb. 16, which will be celebrated as Washington's Birthday, in the Mitzi Newhouse Theater at Lincoln Center. "We tried to stress to the writers," she said, "that they can do their own thing."

"The committee was created," Mrs. Lawford told a news conference in the theater, "to have a permanent, national organization, based in New York, that would sponsor a continuing program in the literary arts — poetry, novel, short fiction, journalism, history, biography, playwriting, screenwriting and so on — to encourage and finance young writers of exceptional promise, and, finally, that would work to enhance the position of New York City as the literary and publishing capital of the world."

Appearing also were Daniel Halpern of Columbia University, Dotson Rader, the novelist, and John Mazzola, president of Lincoln Center.

In the future, there will be 10 readings by distinguished writers. Next fall, the committee will also sponsor a benefit to raise funds for its activities, which include the granting of five $10,000 scholarships at Columbia University "for young writers around the nation who show outstanding promise."

The readings are also part of a Columbia University Graduate Writing Division seminar. Each author will participate in university seminar sessions when their writings are analyzed.

LEARNING, THE ARTS, AND ME (LAM)

1981-82

A nursery program for 3, 4 and 5 year olds with an emphasis on the creative arts.

The Third Street Music School Settlement has expanded its pre-school arts program to include a nursery school. Your young child can get an early start in creative, intellectual, emotional and physical development, through the arts, during the critical first five years of growth. Important elements of the program include:

* All art forms - music, art, drama and dance balanced within a nursery curriculum
* Small classes for individual attention - enrollment limited to 15 children
* Besides the nursery setting, studio environments will be used for teaching the arts
* Special emphasis on positive self-awareness and socialization
* Regular communication between parents and teachers
* Records kept on each child

30 weeks of instruction - from September through May

The Third Street Music School Settlement has more than 86 years of experience serving young people of Greater New York, including programs for the pre-school child. It is now able to draw upon this vast experience and offer an enriched nursery school program designed for the individual needs of the young child through direct exposure to the arts.

Classes are team-taught by professional dancers, musicians, artists and actors who have been chosen for their warm and understanding personalities as well as their formal qualifications. Fran Onne, Co-Ordinator of Pre-School Activities at the Third Street Music School Settlement, will head the program. Ms. Onne received her B.A. in Music Education from Queens College and has completed her M.A. in Early Childhood Education at Columbia University.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURE

A personal interview with the child and at least one parent or guardian is requested before formal registration. In this way, the teacher is better able to assess each child's individual needs. Please call the School Registrar at 777-3240 for an interview time and/or further information.

FEES AND CLASS MEETING TIMES

No. Sessions Weekly	Days of the Week	*Annual Cost per Child	Annual Supply & Materials Fee
