HUMAN VANS DO ALL THE MOVING.

Picturesque and Often Pathetic Scenes Mark the Exodus of Household Gods and Goods from the Forlorn Dwellings of Cherry Hill.

It was moving day in the slums yesterday.

Early in the morning the neighborhoods of Baxter, Cherry, Roosevelt, Mulberry and Thompson streets took on an air of extra activity, and by 10 o'clock nineteen of the most wretched rookeries in this city were cleared of their inmates by the Board of Health.

These nineteen abodes of misery are part of the forty-two tenements recently con-feather beds on their heads—beds with fat sides and under tightly tied covers, and piling on the agony came great, hot, and uncomfortable in coverings of bewildering calicoes.

No Decision Will Be Made Until the Court-Martial of Bishop Is Concluded.

The court-martial of Cadet Elliott H. Rand, of the West Point Military Academy, charged with hazing "Piebes" Harris and Neely, was concluded yesterday. He was defended by Lieutenant Davis and no decision will be announced until after Cadet Bishop's case is finished.

Rand denied all the charges preferred by First Lieutenant Robert L. Howe. "I admit," said Cadet Rand, "that I was cognizant of the hazing of these men. I also admit that I did ask one of them why he changed his position, and I also admit giving the signal of the approach of Lieutenant Howe. I deny, however, that I gave any orders, or that their continued attitudes were due to any orders from me."

PLUNGED OUT OF A WINDOW.

Herman Seelig, an Insane Man, Fell Three Stories and Was Badly Hurt.

Herman Seelig, a pawnbroker, after having jumped from a third-story window to an iron cellar door in the area below, is still alive and has a fair chance for recovery.

He is at present lying insensible and badly injured at Bellevue Hospital. He was taken from there a few hours before preparatory to becoming an inmate of Bloomingdale Asylum.

Seelig was admitted to Bellevue on July 21. After an examination by Drs. Williams and Fitch he was declared to be insane. Yesterday morning his brother, Henry Seelig, received his release from the hospital and took him to the home of his wife, Mrs. S. Lewal, at No. 329 Third street. These arrangements were to be made for his transportation to the asylum.

A patient was left for a short time with a professional nurse. Shortly afterward Seelig jumped from the bed and before the nurse could recover himself he fell from a window and fell on an iron door three stories below.

An ambulance was summoned and Seelig was taken back to Bellevue Hospital. An examination showed that the skull was fractured, the right forearm broken and the head and body severely bruised.

PERIN H. SUMNER ARRESTED. Perin H. Sumner, the "Great American Identical" whose recent history had dealt with Charles H. Goodwin, of Haverhill, Mass., caused him to be indicted for swindling, was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeant Cuff and McNaught, of the District Attorney's office. The detectives had been on the hunt for Sumner since Tuesday. They learned yesterday that he was in an office at No. 237 Broadway, and they later arrested him there. Sumner was later arraigned before Recorder Coffey in Part I, General Sessions, and was admitted to $1,000 bail.

Eviction of Tenement Dwellers by Board of Health.

Nineteen houses condemned by the Health Board were emptied of their occupants yesterday on Cherry Hill and other parts of the city. In a few instances the police were so deeply touched by the misfortunes of families who had been unable to find new places of shelter, and in which there was sickness, that they granted a respite until to-day.

went to the Morgan home and had a long interview with the young woman. At last he told her point blank that he wanted the jewelry.

The girl looked at the detective in apparent surprise, and was very indignant. She acted her part well, and even the detective who had believed he was sure of his prey, began to have doubts.

She denied in the most solemn manner that she had anything to do with the robbery, but the detective pretended to know a great deal more than he really did, and finally succeeded in getting her to such a state of nervousness that she broke down completely and confessed.

"I took the jewels," she said, "before I went out with the children, and hid them in the dog house. Last Thursday I carried them across the fields toward Avondale and hid them under some dirt, stones and branches near a stream. In order to remember the spot where I placed them, I erected a stone mound where they can easily be found." She denied that she had any accomplice in the robbery.

She was at once ordered to get ready and go with the detective to the spot where she had hidden the jewels, and the missing jewelry, while somewhat tarnished from their long burial underground, were all intact.

When the missing property had been restored to Mrs. Morgan, who had been made almost ill by its loss, she called the girl to her side and said: "Eugenie, I am surprised that you should do this."

The girl burst into tears and begged to be forgiven, promising that she would lead a better life, if allowed to go free.

After a consultation the Morgans concluded not to prosecute any charge against the girl, provided she would leave the State on the first train. This the girl promised to do, and she would take a steamer for France at once. In company with Detective Bruce, Eugenie left Nutley for New York. It is said that she sailed yesterday.

HUNT A TERROR IN COURT.

Tried to Hit the Clerk and Threatened Magistrate Kudlich.

Matthew Hunt, forty-one years old, of No. 641 East Twelfth street, a member of the "Dry Dock Gang," was arraigned in the Essex Market Court, yesterday afternoon, charged with assaulting Conductor Hugh M. Kelly, of an Avenue C line car, and with creating a disturbance in the car.

In court he tried to assault Clerk Dyer, threatened violence to Magistrate Kudlich, and five men struggled for fifteen minutes to get him into the car.

Conductor Kelly said that when he asked Hunt for his fare the latter hit him in the face and the passengers fled from the car, and the Hunt and the conductor rolled on the floor.

Policeman Hogan, of the Union Market Station, arrived and arrested Hunt, after using his hands in the car.

Hunt, when arraigned, tried to hit Clerk Dyer in the face, and would have succeeded had not Roundsmen O'Brien seized him. He then picked up an attendant and tried to hurt it at the clerk's head.

"You have got my case already decided," said Hunt to Magistrate Kudlich.

"No, I haven't," said the Magistrate, "but I will have in a minute."

"I should like to punch your face," said Hunt to the Magistrate.

He was committed to the Workhouse.
