

HILL AND BRYAN WILL MEET TO-DAY.

Candidate Assured of a Cordial Reception in Albany.

The Senator and Other Prominent Citizens Will Be at the Station.

Nominee to Take Luncheon at Wolfert's Roost with Well-Known Albany People.

WILL SPEAK IN THE AFTERNOON.

An Enormous Crowd Expected to Hear the Address in City Hall Park—Significance of Hill's Action.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 24.—It is thought that City Hall square will hardly accommodate the large crowd of people who will gather to receive the Democratic candidate for President, Mr. Bryan, when he arrives here to-morrow afternoon.

Norton Chase, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, has completed arrangements for the reception and has appointed a Reception Committee of one hundred representative citizens of both political parties. But all of them are admirers of Bryan.

The train with Mr. and Mrs. Bryan aboard will arrive here at 4:05. It will be met at the station by the Reception Committee and Senator Hill, who will, it is said, accompany the nominee and his wife to Wolfert's Roost, where the Senator, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan and a few prominent Albany people will partake of luncheon. After this, Mr. Bryan will be driven to the City Hall square, where he will make his speech.

Senator Hill would not to-day give out a list of those who will be present at the luncheon.

The arrangements for the City Hall square meeting are in the hands of P. E. McCabe. The platform will be built directly in front of the City Hall entrance, and now who can criticize if he supports the candidates of his party when the State Convention gives instruction with equal vigor, equal determination, and equal pertinacity?

SERIES OF OVATIONS.

Mr. Bryan Receives Hearty Greeting from New Yorkers While on His Way to Winnisnook Lodge.

Big Indian-In-the-Catskills, N. Y., Aug. 24.—William Jennings Bryan is a guest of Chairman James S. Hinkley, at Winnisnook Lodge, to-night. His journey thither from Upper Red Hook was marked by a series of ovations. There was no mistaking the cordiality of the people who cheered him, and thronged about him, eager to grasp his hand. They were gathered at all the stations along the route; they were scattered along the country roads, and they gave him the heartiest of receptions when he at last reached the end of his day's travel.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan left Upper Red Hook at noon. In the survey with them were Mr. and Mrs. Perrine. After the rain of the previous night the roads were in excellent condition, and the way lay through one of the most beautiful portions of Dutchess County. From houses along the road whose occupants recognized Mr. Bryan's face there came cheery greetings. The women waved their handkerchiefs, the men bowed and several children waved small flags.

At Upper Red Hook two youngsters with flags ran from a house that was draped with bunting, and came to the survey, which stopped. Mr. Bryan leaned out and gave them each a button, to their great delight.

Greeted at Rhinebeck. At Rhinebeck Colonel Webster R. Clearwater and several other staunch old Democrats were on the porch of the hotel. They bowed and waved their hats until the party was out of sight.

Rhinebeck was reached at 1:30 o'clock, and J. D. Schoonmaker, assistant superintendent of the Cornell Steamship Company, was the first to grasp Mr. Bryan's hand. With him were Assemblyman W. S. Van Keuren, a Republican; John G. Van Etten, of Kingston, a delegate to the Chicago convention; Charles A. Schulz, who represented the sejoyners at Winnisnook Lodge; J. A. Coen, Aaron Van Ethen, Andrew Barrett, Abram Hasbrouck and Colonel Bert Hasbrouck, of Kingston; John E. Lasher, of Rondout, and M. J. Tracy, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan bade adieu to the Perrines, and were escorted aboard the tug D. C. Mills, which steamed into the slip see people gathered together without wanting to make a speech. I believe I represent the best interest of the American people. I believe in platforms—platforms not to get in on, but platforms to stand on when you get in. I believe the money question is the paramount issue of this campaign. I want you to study the question, and when you study remember that there are some people who firmly believe in the gold standard. (Voice in the crowd—"That is good.") If you believe in bimetallicism you ought to believe in it to the extent that you will vote with those who want to bring it about. No political party has ever declared for the gold standard. The man who advocates the gold standard in this country is a man without a party, and the man who thinks the gold standard is a bad thing, but that this nation must suffer under it until some other nation comes to our relief, will be a man without a party after this election, if I am anything of a prophet. We must make politics a business this year.

A man who has a small business is as much interested in it as a man who has a large business. It is all you have, and you have as much right to protect your small interests as any other man has to protect his large interests. But I must close, for if I talk much longer I will have made a speech.

While Mr. Bryan was speaking, the big river steamer Albany, her deck crowded with passengers, slowly glided up to the dock. The passengers took in the situation at once, and there was an outburst of cheering, which was swelled in volume by the crowd on the landing. It was a reception of which Mr. Bryan might well feel proud.

Crowd at Kingston. There was another crowd at Kingston,

Big Indian was reached at 4 o'clock. Winnisnook Lodge is ten miles from here over the mountain roads. The crowd at the station was large and enthusiastic and closed up around the Bryans as they stepped from the cars. The air was filled with cheering.

So great was the crush that Mr. Bryan could not get to the conveyance that was in waiting, and so insistent were the demands for a speech that he was taken to the house of Willard Marsh, a member of the Central Committee from Ulster, just opposite the station.

Speech at Big Indian. Mr. Bryan spoke from the porch and said in part:

I am very much surprised and gratified to find so many people here, so many people gathered by interest or curiosity. I hope that those who have come to see will stay to pray. We do not wish to call anybody hard names. When I refer to our opponents as goldbugs, I do it with the same good feeling as those who are against me call me a lunatic. We have entered upon a great campaign; there are, of course, two sides in the fight. There are those who believe that the continuation of the gold standard will be disastrous to the country and those who believe it is the only way we can have prosperity. Each citizen must study the question for himself, and as he does so, he must remember that he is responsible for the vote he casts. All I ask of the American people as a candidate for the highest honor in their gift is that every ballot will represent what every voter thinks. If everybody does this the majority will rule, and if we lose we must hide the time when we can bring the majority to agreeing to what we believe right. There are a number of people in this country who think we are desirous of de-

SEVEN LIFE GUARDS SAVE A BRIDAL COUPLE.

Into the Surf They Dash, While Crowds Look on with Nerves at Tension.

Clasped in Each Other's Arms and Nearly Overcome When Taken from the Sea.

Undertow of a Big Breaker Had Swept Them Almost to Their Death.

LIFE BOAT IN THE GREATEST PERIL.

Manned with Difficulty for the Rescue. Cheers Resound as the Exhausted Pair Are Brought to Shore.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24.—It required the united efforts of seven of the city life guards to save Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bannan, a bridal couple from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from drowning in the surf at this resort this morning. It was the most thrilling rescue of the season and was witnessed by thousands of people who cheered the brave guards in their struggle.

Mr. and Mrs. Bannan were married five weeks ago and have since been spending their honeymoon here. This morning they went bathing near North Carolina avenue. The sea ran unusually high, and a strong northeast wind in addition, sending great combers rolling shoreward, created strong currents beneath the surface of the water.

All unconsciously the bridal couple, who were bathing at a point little frequented by the great throngs, worked their way into deep and still deeper water. They did not realize their danger until a huge breaker rolled over them, and before they could regain their feet the returning wave had swept them into water beyond their depth.

Bannan is a comparatively good swimmer, but his bride, seized with terror, hunched about his neck, rendered futile his every effort to regain the shore while strong currents momentarily swept them farther out. The woman's shrill screams, mingled with Bannan's hoarse cry for help, were heard by the life guards, and almost at the same instant Guard Asa Parker, of the Tennessee Avenue Station, and Guard Peter Parker, at Virginia avenue, seized their life buoys, and, plunging into the surf, swam to the rescue. The heavy sea made their progress slow, and Captain Lake, who opportunely appeared on the scene, realized that other steps must be taken if the imperilled others were to be saved.

It seemed suicidal to attempt to launch a boat, but, shouting orders to Guards Gale, Lindsey, Calhoun, Davis and Miller to follow him, the plucky captain leaped into the surf. The others followed, and, after a hard struggle in which the boat was several times filled with water and almost swamped, it was gotten through the line of breakers. By this time the lovers, tightly clasped in each other's arms and kept afloat only by the man's desperate struggles, had drifted fully 300 yards from shore. They were exhausted and could have lasted little longer when the two Parkers reached their side and placed the life buoys about them. Both bathers and guards were in a state of collapse when the lifeboat reached them, and immediately after being pulled into the boat Mr. and Mrs. Bannan became unconscious and were resuscitated with difficulty when the shore was reached. They were removed to their hotel, where it is stated to-night that the condition of neither is serious.

Sporting League a Myth. The promoters of the "American Protective Sporting League" did not appear at the Hotel Barhould yesterday afternoon to perform a permanent organization. Several of the large legitimate clubs of this and neighboring cities did not look upon the project favorably, consequently the League was killed in its infancy.

It isn't much trouble for a really healthy man to be good humored. Jollity and exuberant health are a proverbial combination. The hearty man who is always laughing doesn't have any trouble with his digestion. It has been said that laughing makes people healthy. The truth is that health makes people laugh.

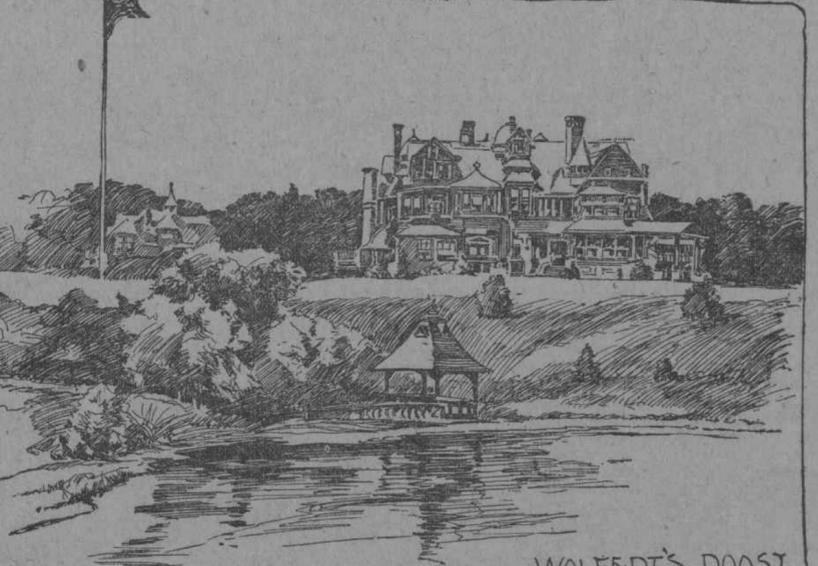

There isn't any other thing so essential to health as regularity in the action of the bowels. Most all sickness starts with some derangement of the digestive functions. Good digestion means good, pure blood, and that means strength. Once let the bowels become clogged with refuse matter, and the whole system is deranged. Impure, poisonous matter gets into the blood and plants the seeds for all sorts of sickness.

Whenever there is a stoppage of the intestinal action, help should be given immediately. Usually a mild, gentle laxative is all that is necessary. A violent, wrenching, griping cathartic is never needed. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most pleasant and successful remedy for occasional or chronic constipation, or costiveness. They are tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules that even the smallest child can easily take. They act in perfect accord with nature and produce no griping or other disagreeable feeling. They should be taken at the first indication of digestive trouble. They stop sour stomach, belching, "heart-burn," flatulence and sick headache. They cure constipation permanently. You can stop taking them after the bowels are thoroughly regulated. Their help lasts. You do not become a slave to their use as with other pills.

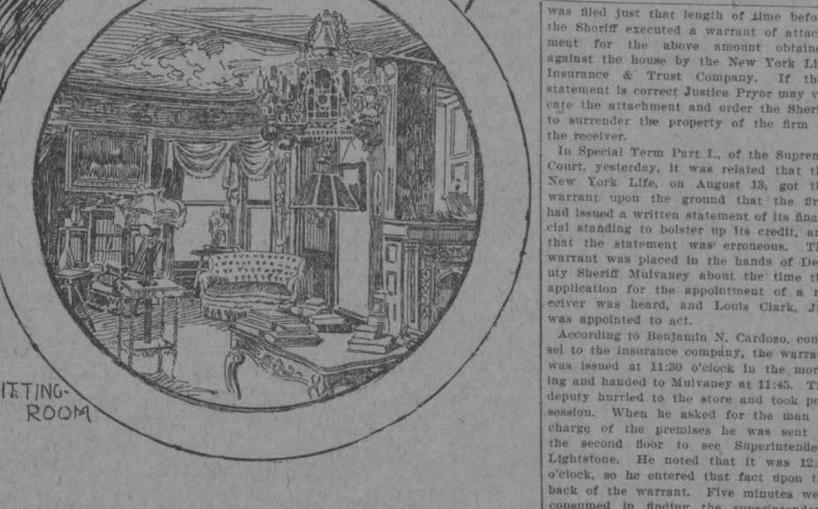

WHAT ELECTRICITY DOES FOR THE MOUTH To-day.

PAINLESS DENTISTRY AS PRACTICED AT THE NEW YORK ELECTRIC DENTAL PARLORS, 16 West 23d St., 265 6th Ave., NEAR 5TH AVE., COR. 11TH ST. MOST people know by sad experience what a bitter mockery dentistry is. Electricity has not only effected a revolution in dental machinery, and contributed to the improvement of operative methods, but by its latest applications in the X-ray and cataphoresis, or the stimulating of teeth by an electric current, the most sensitive tooth can be treated, filled or extracted without pain. Painless dentistry is the result of all those who are interested we refer for further information to the article in the Standard Record of August 16, page 22. For the benefit of the incredulous we will extract or fill one tooth FREE. The following persons cheerfully recommend our methods as highly scientific and absolutely painless: DR. THOMAS W. extending from the steps to the curb. It will be twenty feet square.

Hill Extends a Friendly Hand. Washington, Aug. 24.—So Bryan will eat at Hill's table at Wolfert's Roost. To the world at large, Republican and Democratic, this should carry the reading which has been given and which is meant. Hill never breaks bread nor offers hospitality save where his hand of friendship is extended. Like the born political fighter that he is, his support is as frank as his enemy. Were he to fight Bryan from now till November, Bryan would never be found sitting at Hill's table. Hill has offered the candidate of Democracy the ungloried and open hand.

Cleveland writes letters. Hill goes to dinner. It will be remembered that Hill gave no sign whether or not he would support the Administration through the days that led to his election to the Senate. He was silent through the first sessions of the Fifty-third Congress, and not until the early months of 1895 was his course made plain. Its signal came from his acceptance of a White House invitation to dinner. The previous year he had declined to go. This time he went, and those who knew the man then and there declared that thereafter the Administration's chief supporter in the Senate would be the Senator from New York. And thus it was.

Supported the President. From then on Hill never refused the gage of battle for Cleveland and his Cabinet. No criticism passed unrebuked, no assault failed to find him on the ramparts. Whatever the issue, whoever the assailant, Hill was first and foremost for the Administration. It was at times Quixote and unnecessary. Even when the President was most at fault, even when the patronage of New York was so thrown as to give the bitterest, most unkindly eyes, Hill had his lance leveled and his visor down.

Such was the man and such his purpose, at Kingston Point at 2 o'clock. There were probably 1,000 persons there, and at sight of the Democratic candidate they broke into continued cheering. They surged, yelling, about Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, and in the crush she was separated from him, but under the care of a muscular policeman, she managed to reach the Delaware and Ulster train that had just backed in. When Mr. Bryan stepped on the rear platform, a score of hands grasped at his, and there were cries for a speech.

Speech at Kingston Point. Mr. Bryan said: I don't care to make any speech. I never probably 800 persons. The majority of them were workmen, who cheered lustily for the candidate. There were calls for a speech, but Mr. Bryan told them they would have a chance to hear him to-morrow, when he will speak in the City Hall.

Mr. Bryan was busy shaking hands until the train pulled out. The party was joined by ex-Superintendent of Banks Charles M. Preston, who is one of the dwellers at Winnisnook. There were cheering crowds at Poughkeepsie, Alabau and Shandaken, where the train stopped, and every man, woman and child wanted to shake the hands of the Democratic standard bearer and his wife.

staying it, but no charge of Anarchy will deter those who believe in taking the control of the Government from the financiers. Encouraging Reports Heard. Two of the most conspicuous men who greeted Mr. Bryan and persons who wield considerable influence in Delaware County were J. K. P. Jackson, the editor of the Utilitarian, of Margaretville, and the veteran Simon B. Champion, of the Stamford Mirror. Both of these gentlemen are waging a hot fight for silver, and declare that recruits are increasing every day in their territory. It was with difficulty that the conveyances could get through the crowd.

Men clambered upon the wheels of Mr. Bryan's buckboard, asking for campaign buttons. Many of them had to go away unsatisfied, but they cheered none the less the retreat at the foot of Coal Slide Mountain. Mr. Bryan announces that he has completed his letter of acceptance, but says he will not make it public until his return to Lincoln.

Mr. Bryan and party will visit Hornellsville next Saturday and deliver an address at the Hornellsville Exposition.

M'ALPIN SURE OF GOLD. Says Bryan's Eastern Trip Has Cost Him Many Votes and McKinley is Sure to Win. Chicago, Aug. 24.—General E. A. McAlpin, of New York, president of the National League of Republican Clubs, who is on his way to the National Convention of the League at Milwaukee, said yesterday: "The League now has a membership of about 2,250,000, enrolled in 18,000 clubs. The present outlook is, in my opinion, entirely satisfactory from a Republican standpoint, and there is no doubt whatever of the election of McKinley and Hobart."

Bryan's speech of acceptance at Madison Square Garden was a total failure, and the people of the East were vastly disappointed, both in the speech and the candidate himself. They expected that he would at least prove himself an orator. I think that his visit to New York has cost him at least 50,000 votes.

was filed just that length of time before the Sheriff executed a warrant of attachment for the above amount obtained against the house by the New York Life Insurance & Trust Company. If that statement is correct Justice Pryor may vacate the attachment and order the Sheriff to surrender the property of the firm to the receiver.

In Special Term Part I., of the Supreme Court, yesterday, it was related that the New York Life, on August 13, got the warrant upon the ground that the firm had issued a written statement of its financial standing to bolster up its credit, and that the statement was erroneous. The warrant was placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Mulvaney about the time the application for the appointment of a receiver was heard, and Louis Clark, Jr., was appointed to act.

According to Benjamin N. Cardozo, counsel to the insurance company, the warrant was issued at 11:30 o'clock in the morning and handed to Mulvaney at 11:45. The deputy hurried to the store and took possession. When he asked for the man in charge of the premises he was sent to the second floor to see Superintendent Lightstone. He noted that it was 12:10 o'clock, so he entered that fact upon the back of the warrant. Five minutes were consumed in finding the superintendent, he says, so that it was really only 12:05 when he formally took possession of the store.

County Clerk Purroy received the order appointing Clark as receiver at 12:05 o'clock, according to the record in his office, but Lawyer Cardozo found there was a difference of two minutes and a half between the clocks in the County Clerk's office and the store. That in the jewelry store was two and a half minutes fast, so that the deputy was there that much ahead of the receiver. Besides, said Mr. Cardozo, the warrant was issued at 11:30 to the New York Life thereby became possessed of the property. Actual possession, he contended, was not necessary.

That was disputed by Benjamin Elstein, who represented the receiver. Mr. Elstein urged that the warrant was not worth a cent until actually served, whereas, the order appointing the receiver went into effect from the moment it was signed. He showed that although the order had not been filed with the County Clerk until 12:05, it had been signed at 11:45. That difference of twenty minutes, he alleged, between the signing of the order and the execution of the warrant entitled the general creditors to a share in the assets of the firm.

Lawyer Elstein offered affidavits by Corkey and Foley, Mulvaney's assistants, to the effect that the deputy did not proceed directly from the Sheriff's office to the store, but stopped to watch a fight at Nassau and Fulton streets, and did not reach the place until 12:08.

Justice Pryor was inclined to agree with Mr. Elstein that the order appointing the receiver was effective from the moment it was signed. He reserved decision.

Silverware, Clothing and a Bank Book Included in the Booty.

Policeman William Bourke, of the Corcoran's Office, returned from a two-weeks' vacation last Sunday night and yesterday he was telling his friends he was sorry he had not remained in town. His apartment at No. 32 Seventh street, had been ransacked by burglars in his absence. The burglars had taken everything except the cooking stove and the furniture. They had picked the lock.

Three suits of clothing, two overcoats, three of his daughter's winter dresses, a gold bracelet, ten shirts, one silver cup, one dozen silver spoons, one dozen knives, one dozen silver forks and his bank book were among the missing property.
