

thing presented a most brilliant appearance.

Early this morning the streets were alive with people who had slept in, or roamed about the streets all night, and crowds swarmed at every point along the line of procession.

Everywhere could be seen tall Circassians in long scarlet cloaks, silver and gold helmeted cuirassiers, green and white uniformed Hussars, and the odd, brightly colored costumes of Asiatics, all presenting a scene of unequalled magnificence.

The color scheme of the decorations on the buildings was somewhat monotonous and the arrangement of the flags and bunting seemed to lack artistic taste, but everything appeared to be according to the custom of Russian and Eastern art, and therefore, most satisfactory to those it was intended to satisfy.

Every window and balcony and grand stand was early occupied, but in very rare cases, and only at well-known houses, was any one allowed upon the roof. At 8 o'clock this morning it was difficult to move about.

The roadway along the line of route was thickly covered with sand, and the wretched pavement was buried some inches deep. Every class of costume was visible among the crowds, and any one skilled in the characteristics of Russian peasantry could have readily indicated from what part of the country the different groups of spectators had come.

The street was criss-crossed with Venetian masts, which bore shields, on which were alternately inscribed the arms of the Russian provinces and the monograms of the Emperor and Empress.

Nearly midway along the route the Governor-General's house was hung with bunting in the Russian colors of white, blue and red and the Imperial black, yellow and white, caught up in festoons with Imperial shields and wreaths. Gas piping had been arranged for the night illumination.

Just outside the entrance stood four obelisks of considerable height, decorated with flags, armorial bearings and vases. In the small square facing the Governor-General's house was an antique pavilion, in which the Emperor received the nobility of Moscow.

At the Tversk gate, or Arc de Triomphe, two towers had been erected, decorated with huge flags, and the initials of the Emperor and Empress. The Town Council of Moscow had erected for themselves on the Place of Triumph a pavilion embellished with spirals and decorated with the arms of Moscow.

Then the thousands upon thousands of spectators knew that the Czar of all the Russias, Czar of Moscow, Kiev, Vladimir, Novgorod, Astrakhan, Poland and Siberia, and other innumerable titles, was coming.

His Majesty was preceded by the Imperial Grand Marshal, Count Pahlen, and two squadrons of cuirassiers, with eagle-crested helmets.

Riding a pure white horse and attired in the full general's uniform of the ever-faithful Preobajensky Regiment came the young autocrat of all the Russias. He sat erect and looked every inch a monarch.

Then the thousands upon thousands of spectators knew that the Czar of all the Russias, Czar of Moscow, Kiev, Vladimir, Novgorod, Astrakhan, Poland and Siberia, and other innumerable titles, was coming.

His Majesty was preceded by the Imperial Grand Marshal, Count Pahlen, and two squadrons of cuirassiers, with eagle-crested helmets.

Riding a pure white horse and attired in the full general's uniform of the ever-faithful Preobajensky Regiment came the young autocrat of all the Russias.

At the head of the procession marched about 250 policemen.

Next came three squadrons of Circassians and Don Cossacks in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At the head of the procession marched about 250 policemen.

Next came three squadrons of Circassians and Don Cossacks in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At the head of the procession marched about 250 policemen.

Next came three squadrons of Circassians and Don Cossacks in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

At their head rode on a black horse Prince Dolgorouki, Grand Master of Ceremonies, in full uniform, followed by his escort and mounted drummers and trumpeters of the Horse Guards.

At their appearance, the admiration of the crowd burst forth into hurrahs and shouts of pleasure, while the pressing of the throng that lined the pavement on both sides rendered it difficult for the soldiers that kept the way to preserve the straight line.

Then came the Emperor's personal guard, the Czar's Hussars, in brilliant scarlet uniforms, with their carbines at rest.

Big, stalwart men, they were, riding beautiful, high-mettled horses.

C. G. Haight, Juror No. 6.

QUAY HAS LEFT PLATT STRANDED.

Continued from First Page.

quickest manner. He was in the Senate until a late hour this afternoon and did not announce his departure to anybody.

HANNA'S EYE IS ON QUAY.

Removed Now That He Means to Have the Pennsylvania Meet McKinley in His Presence.

Cleveland, May 21.—Ex-Governor McKinley is coming up to Cleveland to-morrow night ostensibly to join Mrs. McKinley, and attend the performance of "The Rivals," at Mark Hanna's Opera House on Saturday.

It is known that he does not intend to return to Canton until next week, however, and the belief is entertained here that Hanna proposes that the Quay conference shall be held under his eagle eye, rather than trust the prosperity advance agent to deal with the wily Pennsylvanian single-handed at Canton.

While this is not interpreted as meaning that Quay will not be welcomed on McKinley's bandwagon, it is believed that Hanna proposes to be a witness to any agreement that Quay may propose.

Mr. Hanna is supervising the building in New Haven provided for under the will of the late William Walter Phelps, to be known as Phelps Memorial Hall; the Kinney Hospital for the Cripple and Paralyzed, on Fifty-ninth street, near Lexington avenue; the Theological Seminary building at Twentieth street and Tenth avenue, and a large commercial building at Varick and Desbrosses streets, now nearly finished.

Besides these he has in progress new buildings in Tarrytown and at Ielp, Long Island; is altering the building owned by the Lawyers' Trust and Finance Company, in William street, and the Downtown Club, in Pine street; is making additions to the rectory and choir rooms of Trinity Chapel, in West Twenty-fifth street, and remodeling houses in Madison and Lexington avenues.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Another visitor of note was Editor Jones, of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post. He has been loyal in his support of McKinley, and says that many of New York's prominent men and papers are deserting Platt and rushing to support McKinley.

Senator Hill's Name Used as a Threat to the Ex-Governor's Friends.

As a Result the Eighth District Convention Was Not Asked to Declare in His Favor.

Mayor Quincy's Ambition Foiled.

The Man Who Started Secretary Olney's Boom Was Forced to Retire from the Contest for Delegate-at-Large to Chicago.

Boston, May 21.—Present indications point strongly to the fact that the allegiance of Massachusetts Democrats to William E. Russell is divided.

His supporters went to the meeting full of hope that their favorite would be enthusiastically endorsed.

Not After Vice-Presidency. Police Commissioner Grant will leave for Cleveland to-night, where he goes to hear Bishop Newman, at the Methodist conference, deliver a lecture to-morrow night on the life of General Grant.

Newest Notes of National Politics. St. Louis, May 21.—Confirmation of a suspicion that Mr. Bland and his friends are a little shy of the new-made silver men who were conducting his Presidential boom, came to-day.

Denver, May 21.—The silver party people and Populists here are joining in a movement to send a committee to Chicago during the Democratic National Convention for the purpose of combining with the silver Democrats on a Presidential candidate in case the convention should fail to nominate a silver man.

Washington, May 21.—Clarkson undoubtedly came over here to confer with Quay about the terms of capitulation to be offered on the occasion of Quay's visit to Canton.

Chicago, May 21.—Medill, having surrendered to the McKinley cause, is laboring with the proverbial zeal of a proselyte.

Pittsburg, May 21.—George Shiras, the third, who is running the McKinley campaign in Allegheny, says his opposition to Quay is because the Senator tried to hold up the appointment of his father, George Shiras, Jr., to the United States Supreme Court bench.

Louisville, May 21.—The first step on the part of the gold standard Democrats toward active work in the coming campaign, was taken to-night at the committee headquarters.

FORAKER TRUE TO M'KINLEY. Governor Bushnell says the Senator Will Make a Great Nominating Speech.

Canton, O., May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

SPLIT ON RUSSELL IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Senator Hill's Name Used as a Threat to the Ex-Governor's Friends.

As a Result the Eighth District Convention Was Not Asked to Declare in His Favor.

Mayor Quincy's Ambition Foiled.

The Man Who Started Secretary Olney's Boom Was Forced to Retire from the Contest for Delegate-at-Large to Chicago.

Boston, May 21.—Present indications point strongly to the fact that the allegiance of Massachusetts Democrats to William E. Russell is divided.

His supporters went to the meeting full of hope that their favorite would be enthusiastically endorsed.

Not After Vice-Presidency. Police Commissioner Grant will leave for Cleveland to-night, where he goes to hear Bishop Newman, at the Methodist conference, deliver a lecture to-morrow night on the life of General Grant.

Newest Notes of National Politics. St. Louis, May 21.—Confirmation of a suspicion that Mr. Bland and his friends are a little shy of the new-made silver men who were conducting his Presidential boom, came to-day.

Denver, May 21.—The silver party people and Populists here are joining in a movement to send a committee to Chicago during the Democratic National Convention for the purpose of combining with the silver Democrats on a Presidential candidate in case the convention should fail to nominate a silver man.

Washington, May 21.—Clarkson undoubtedly came over here to confer with Quay about the terms of capitulation to be offered on the occasion of Quay's visit to Canton.

Chicago, May 21.—Medill, having surrendered to the McKinley cause, is laboring with the proverbial zeal of a proselyte.

Pittsburg, May 21.—George Shiras, the third, who is running the McKinley campaign in Allegheny, says his opposition to Quay is because the Senator tried to hold up the appointment of his father, George Shiras, Jr., to the United States Supreme Court bench.

Louisville, May 21.—The first step on the part of the gold standard Democrats toward active work in the coming campaign, was taken to-night at the committee headquarters.

FORAKER TRUE TO M'KINLEY. Governor Bushnell says the Senator Will Make a Great Nominating Speech.

Canton, O., May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Canton, Ohio, May 21.—Among several distinguished visitors who called to see ex-Governor McKinley to-day was George W. Forman, representative of the Bankers' Alliance, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was cordially welcomed.

Advertisement for Hood's Sarsaparilla, Great Hood's Sarsaparilla, Hood's Pills.