

DESPERATE DEED OF AN INSANE WIFE.

Mrs. Cross Chokes Her Husband Almost to Death and Then Hangs Herself.

He Is Attacked While Asleep, and Is Saved by the Landlady's Timely Arrival.

WIFE WAS INSANE ABOUT MONEY.

After Her Desperate Act the Demented Woman Goes to the Kitchen and Is Found Hanging by a Rope.

Paterson, N. J., June 4.—Mrs. Louisa M. Cross, twenty-seven years old, committed suicide by hanging herself at her home, No. 101 Broadway, this morning, two hours after she had been balked in an attempt to strangle her husband and herself.

Joseph J. Cross, her husband, is baggage-master on the Erie road, and his run is between New York and Watkville. He resided at the latter place until a few months ago, when he moved to this city to gratify his wife's desire to live with her old friend, Mrs. Hison. She disliked being alone during her husband's long absences on the road and Mrs. Hison received the couple as boarders, though her house was really not large enough to accommodate them comfortably.

A few days ago Mrs. Hison regretfully told Cross that they would have to move, and went with Mrs. Cross to select new quarters. Apartments on West street were finally chosen, and Mrs. Cross spent yesterday in preparing them for occupancy.

Toward evening Mrs. Hison went to her home, but could find no trace of Mrs. Cross. When she did not return in the early evening Mrs. Hison became alarmed, and telegraphed Mr. Cross at Jersey City. Mrs. Cross was finally found in the West street apartments. She said that she was lying in a closet when Mrs. Hison made her first visit, and tearfully expressed her grief that she should have to start on a journey and be separated from her old friend. When Cross arrived home he found his wife safe, and her story of hiding in the closet was not referred to again.

At 4 o'clock this morning Mrs. Hison was awakened by stifled cries from the sleeping apartment occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Cross, and rushed in to find the cause. It was Cross who had made the outcry. He had awakened a few minutes before to find his wife's hand at his throat. He was powerless to escape from her grasp, and when Mrs. Hison arrived he had been choked almost into insensibility, and Mrs. Cross was herself growing weak, as with her other hand she was trying to choke herself. Her head was under her husband's arm. One thumb was pressed deep into his throat and one into her own.

Mrs. Hison had the greatest difficulty in dragging the woman away and calming her, but did so finally by an appeal to her love for her child, a six-month-old boy, that on the same bed. Mother and child were finally quieted, but Mrs. Hison was very nervous, and Mrs. Cross cried, "Oh, if I could only die!"

It was nearly 7 o'clock when Mrs. Hison was again awakened by her husband's cries. She found her husband lying on the floor, and she rushed to his side. She found him lying on his back, his head under his hand, and his feet raised in the air. She found him lying on his back, his head under his hand, and his feet raised in the air. She found him lying on his back, his head under his hand, and his feet raised in the air.

COULD NOT ENFORCE THE COURT'S RULING.

Frank Leon Attempts to Make His Young Wife Obey a Novel Decree.

Recorder McDonough Had Ruled She Must Live with Her Mother-in-Law.

NO TROUBLE ABOUT HER SUPPORT.

But the Wife Refused, and Declared Her Husband Beat Her in an Attempt to Carry Out the Court's Decision.

There was considerable curiosity manifested yesterday by many people to get the text of the decision rendered by Recorder McDonough, of Hoboken, wherein he ruled that a wife whose husband is unable to support her must be provided for by the husband's mother, and that should she fail to take up her residence with her mother-in-law and accept the latter's support, she should have no redress from the Court.

Recorder McDonough delivered the decision in the case of Frank Leon, who was arrested on his wife's complaint of non-support. The wife eloped and was married, but did not get along well together, and finally separated, the wife returning to her mother's home and Leon going to reside with his mother. She had him arrested for non-support, and upon the hearing before the Recorder it was shown that Leon was willing to support his wife if she would take up her abode with him at her mother-in-law's home. Then it was that the Recorder, in a few words, decided that the young wife had no redress if she refused the offer. The decision was a verbal one, and no notes were taken.

When Leon's mother, who is well-to-do, and resides at No. 610 Second avenue, Hoboken, learned of the decision, she said she would acquiesce in it, and prepared to receive her daughter-in-law. The latter, however, was highly indignant. Yesterday she appeared again before the Recorder and declared that in attempting to enforce the Court's decision her husband had called upon her at her mother's house, and finding her in, had asked her to obey the Court and go with him to his mother's home. The wife refused, and then, she said, Leon pulled her hair and said he would punch her head if she didn't obey.

ON THE WIFE'S CHARGE A WARRANT FOR ARREST AND BATTERY WAS ISSUED. Leon had not been arrested up to last night. It remains to be seen whether the Court's unique decision is enforced.

WIZARDS DEATH AT LAST.

Mrs. Harris, Who Was Treated by the Magic Healer, a Prey to Consumption.

She Refused to Take Medicine Prescribed by Her Physician and Believed in the Medium.

HER HUSBAND IS ALMOST INSANE.

Case Will Be Investigated by the Grand Jury and Shavno May Be Indicted—He is Already in Jail.

Montclair, N. J., June 4.—Mrs. Jane Harris, the victim of the alleged colored medium and magic healer, "Professor" Zacks Shavno, whose treatment of Mrs. Harris led to his arrest for practicing medicine without a license, died at her home, corner of Bloomfield avenue and Hartley street, this morning of consumption. Her case, her regular physician says, was caused by Shavno's treatment. Mrs. Harris was a colored woman, who refused the medicine of her own physician and was secretly treated by Shavno, a colored medium from Yonkers, who secured considerable money from her by declaring that he would cure her by Decoration Day. At the hearing in court it developed that Shavno had gained the woman's complete confidence, and she took his nostrums with implicit faith in their curative powers. According to the woman's confession to her husband when he discovered that she was receiving Shavno's treatment, he made his appearance at the home of Mrs. Harris the latter was away, and told the woman she was filled with poison, and that her several friends were really her enemies. He then talked to her of the great remedies he had for all cures through a gift from above and urged her to have faith in him. Her faith proved fatal and she now lies dead in a casket.

Dr. Levi W. Case, who attended the woman at the first appearance of her trouble, was very much surprised to learn of Mrs. Harris' death. He declares that the influenza, with which she was first attacked, had developed into acute tuberculosis, accompanied by bronchitis, but that he was called in too late to do any good. He is to go before the Grand Jury, and the alleged bogus doctor will probably be indicted. Harris says she will prosecute the man to the hilt.

It was said today that the medical fraternity will in all probability prosecute Shavno.

WON HIS POINT AT LAST.

Superintendent Francis Opposed Two School Teachers, Lost His Place, but Finally Triumphed.

Westfield, N. J., June 4.—The Board of School Trustees has been defeated and expelled Superintendent Francis in their contest with two teachers, Misses Pomeroy and Grafman—disgraced and several weeks ago Mr. Francis reported them to the Board as insubordinate. The Board took the matter under consideration. Mr. Francis, considering that the delay in action that followed was to be construed in the light of the trustees' hostility to him, notified the Teachers' Committee that he would not be a candidate for re-election. At the Board's May meeting when the appointments of teachers for the ensuing year were made the Misses Grafman and Pomeroy were not re-appointed, but their positions were left unfilled for a month. At the same meeting Professor Edwards, of the Adelphi Normal School, was elected as superintendent and Mr. Francis was retired. The action of the Board caused a sensation, as Mr. Francis had been superintendent for many years and was generally liked. Added to this was a sentiment of sympathy, he having lost a leg and is incapacitated from physical exertion.

For four weeks there has been a quiet endeavor looking toward securing the reappointment of the two teachers, and for several days their friends have exerted themselves to attain their object. Professor Edwards, who was appointed superintendent, received a favorable impression from his interview with them, and influential friends of the Board met but they were not appointed again. The decision is regarded as virtually a vindication of the two teachers. At the same time the Board decided against having any closing exercises for the schools, although the schools had been drilling and rehearsing for the past month.
