AT THE BEDSIDE OF VANDERBILT.

Physicians, in Constant Attendance, Can Only Hope for the Best.

His Condition Last Night No Better Than in the Early Morning.

Miss Gertrude and His Second Son Alfred Summed Home from Newport.

NOISES IN THE STREET DISTURB.

Policemen Stationed in Front of the House Request Drivers to Go Softly, and Threaten with Arrest a Man Who Complains of Their Action.

The prospects of Cornelius Vanderbilt's recovery from the paralytic stroke which he sustained last Tuesday, were not as good last night as they seemed the day before.

Mr. Vanderbilt's absent relatives were summoned yesterday morning, and his daughter, Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, and his second son, Alfred, arrived post-haste from Newport at 7:45 o'clock. Dr. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb were summoned from Vermont, and were expected to arrive during the night. Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, who is in Europe, notified Mr. H. Walter Webb by cable that he would sail from Southampton or Liverpool to-morrow morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Twombly were at the palatial residence on Fifth avenue during the evening, and Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard was there most of the day. Mr. Frederick Vanderbilt was in and out of the house half a dozen times during the day, and so was Mr. William K. Vanderbilt. George Vanderbilt, who has been stopping at his country place, Blimere, near Asheville, N. C., was notified of his brother's dangerous condition by wire, and it is said that he is on his way home.

The bulletin issued by the physicians during the afternoon and evening of yesterday were to the effect that Mr. Vanderbilt was comfortable and no worse, but the summoning home of the elder children, the long visits of the doctors and relatives, and the hurried dispatching of messengers and telegraph boys at frequent intervals from the Vanderbilt residence during the later hours of the evening were circumstances not calculated to confirm the cautious assurance of the doctors that there had been no change.

Latest Bulletin Displayed.

The last bulletin given out from the Fifty-seventh street entrance to the mansion was, like the rest of those issued during the day, written on note paper, bearing the embossed line, "1 West Fifty-seventh Street," apparently by the hand of Dr. Delafield. It said:

10:15 p. m.—Mr. Vanderbilt's condition shows no material change. He has passed a comfortable day.

JAMES W. McLANE, M. D.
WILLIAM H. DRAPER, M. D.
FRANCIS DELAFIELD, M. D.
E. G. JANEWAY, M. D.

This bulletin had been preceded by a note to the representatives of the press at 8 o'clock signed by Dr. McLane, saying that there would be a consultation, and

To the writer Dr. Janeway said: "Mr. Vanderbilt speaks, but not without difficulty. He could not articulate at all on Tuesday. He has no use of his right arm or right leg. Still he is resting comfortably. The cool weather of today brings him relief. I do not anticipate any great change in his condition for several days. At present there is no physician with him, only Mrs. Shepard, his sister, Mrs. Vanderbilt, who has been with him since his seizure, and two nurses."

Arrival of Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt.

Mr. Gwynne, Mrs. Vanderbilt's brother from Cincinnati, and Mrs. Gwynne, left the Vanderbilt residence shortly after 7 o'clock in a carriage, and shortly afterward ex-Secretary Whitney emerged from his residence across the street and drove away in a cab. They went to meet Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt and Mr. Vanderbilt's second son Alfred, who had been summoned from Newport. Upon the party's return Alfred Vanderbilt helped his sister from the cab. Miss Vanderbilt wore a blue and white gown and a straw hat trimmed with flowers. She and her brother ran across the pavement eagerly and rushed into the house.

Dinner was served shortly after the arrival of the party from Newport, and the gas was lighted in the library fronting on Fifth avenue. About 8 o'clock young Alfred Vanderbilt came out alone, sauntered around into Fifty-eighth street and sent a telegram. Returning, he said: "There is no change in father's condition. He rests comfortably. Some of the other members of the family have been telegraphed for. I don't know just who of our relatives are already in town. I just arrived to-night myself."

Young Reginald and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, the two youngest children of the sick man, remain in Newport, and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, mother of the sick man, had not arrived from Lenox up to 10 o'clock.

After the last bulletin was issued at 10:30 last night the physicians remained in the mansion for over an hour. When they finally emerged, Dr. McLane said he was going out for only a short time, and would return and remain at Mr. Vanderbilt's bedside all night.

Devotion of the Whitneys.

Ex-Secretary Whitney and his son, Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, made a late call at the Vanderbilt mansion at 10 o'clock, and remained for over an hour. Mr. Twombly also called again while they were there and remained a long time.

Mr. Vanderbilt did not rest well on Wednesday night, and yesterday morning his condition was worse than it had been at any time since his seizure. Dr. McLane, Dr. Draper and Dr. Delafield called at the mansion early, and at 9:30 the following bulletin was issued:

Mr. Vanderbilt passed a restless night, and his condition is less favorable than it was yesterday.

JAMES W. McLANE, M. D.
W. H. DRAPER, M. D.
FRANCIS DELAFIELD, M. D.
E. G. JANEWAY, M. D.

Ex-Secretary Whitney came across the street from his own mansion at 9:35 o'clock and issued from the Vanderbilt residence shortly after the first of the physicians came out. Mr. Whitney said that in consequence of the tanbark which had been strewn along Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street having been softened by the rain, Mr. Vanderbilt had been disturbed during the night by passing vehicles and had not had a good night's rest. Mr. Whitney said further that steps ought to be taken to stop unnecessary traffic in both streets, and the probable effect of his opinion was seen later when Officers Boyle, Adams and Kiltler, who had been detailed by Captain Stankamp, began ordering truck drivers to "slow down" while passing the Vanderbilt residence.

WHITNEY BOLTS!

Under No Possible Circumstances Will He Vote for or Help to Elect the Democratic Candidates.

W. R. Hearst, the Journal, New York: Will you be kind enough to correct the statement that I desire the indorsement by the State Organization of the Chicago ticket. There are no possible conditions or circumstances that would induce me to vote for it or assist it.

state his position in the campaign since his return from the convention until last night. His statement was in a note to the editor of the Journal, and was as follows: "Will you be kind enough to correct the statement that I desire the indorsement by the State organization of the Chicago ticket? There are no possible conditions or circumstances that would induce me to vote for it or assist it."

Mr. Whitney has abandoned the fight and will take no part in the campaign. He has made arrangements to go abroad in a few days, possibly to-morrow, unless the condition of Mr. Vanderbilt or the funeral of ex-Governor Russell should postpone his trip. He has urged the State leaders at all the recent conferences to bolt the ticket and platform.

Mr. Whitney's intention of going abroad to remain during the campaign was regarded last night as a good indication that there is to be no second Democratic ticket placed in the field, and that those advocates of the single gold standard who have repudiated the action of the Chicago convention will either remain away from the polls on election day or vote for the Republican candidates.

Normandie-by-the-Sea, N. J., July 16.—The news was received from New York late to-night that ex-Secretary Whitney had given out a statement in New York, this evening, in which he asserted that under no conditions would he support the Chicago platform.

Senator Hill, when he read Mr. Whitney's statement, said: "I do not care to make any comments upon it now."

Chairman Hinkley also declined to express an opinion.

A flurry was caused here to-day by the appearance of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury William E. Curtis, to see Senator Hill. The two gentlemen have not been on particularly friendly terms. They held a conference for nearly half an hour, and Chairman Hinkley, who has been in all of Hill's other conferences, took no part. Indeed, Major Hinkley was as much puzzled as

SEWALL TO THE JOURNAL

Democracy's Vice-Presidential Candidate Apates Its Work for the Cause of the People

To W. R. Hearst, the Journal, New York: The respect and esteem of his home people is the dearest thing in a world to any man. The wealth of cordiality which has characterized my reception in my native place has touched me deeply. I appreciate most heartily the grand work of the Journal for the cause of the people. It is doing much for the ticket. (Signed) ARTHUR SEWALL.

Brooklyn, last night waiting for death to release him from his sufferings. The boy is only four years old. He is suffering from hydrophobia, and the physicians say he will die within three days.

Harry lived with his parents in a neat little cottage at Richmond Hill. He was playing with the dog of a neighbor about five weeks ago when the animal turned on him and sank its teeth into the boy's left forearm, inflicting a lacerated wound.

The lad ran to his home crying, and showed the wound to his mother, and she applied some home remedy. The wound soon healed and the boy apparently suffered no ill effects as a result of the bite.

Mrs. Seckerle had almost forgotten about her child having been bitten when, Wednesday morning, the dread symptoms of hydrophobia appeared. The boy refused to eat his breakfast and acted strangely, and when she brought a glass of water to him at the table he toppled off his chair to the floor in a convulsion. These attacks continued throughout the day, and Mrs. Seckerle again doctored the boy as best she could.

Her medicines had no good effect upon the child and yesterday morning she started for St. Catherine Hospital with the little fellow. On the way he had one convulsion after another, and became so violent that she found it difficult to hold him. When she reached the hospital the lad was exhausted.

The physicians examined him, and immediately diagnosed his case as one of hydrophobia. They found that his case was so far advanced as to make his recovery impossible, and all day yesterday and through last night, drugs were administered at regular intervals to quiet the patient.

Whenever the effects of the opiates would wear off the ravings of the poor boy could be heard throughout the dormitory in which he lay, and his snarling was pitiable to hear.

COLONEL HUNGERFORD DYING.

Mrs. John W. Mackay's Father Has Only a Few Hours to Live.

Rome, July 16.—The condition of Colonel Daniel E. Hungerford, father of Mrs. John W. Mackay, who is lying seriously ill at the Villa Ada, the residence of one of his daughters, in this city, shows no improvement, and his death is regarded as merely a question of hours.

Colonel Hungerford has been suffering from an affection of the liver since last December, and has speedily grown worse within the past few months.

GIRL BICYCLIST RUN DOWN.

Drunken Express Wagon Driver Deliberately Knocks Her Off Her Wheel.

George S. Sherlin, thirty-seven years old, of No. 304 West Eleventh street, was fined $10 in Jefferson Market Court yesterday, on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Wednesday night about 8 o'clock Sherlin, who was intoxicated, was driving an express wagon on Ninth avenue. At Fourteenth street he saw a girl riding a bicycle, and tried to run her against a pillar of the elevated road. She escaped, and then Sherlin lashed his horse into a run and deliberately ran her down. She was thrown from her wheel and severely injured about the legs. Policeman Cullane arrested Sherlin, but the girl refused to make a complaint against him, because she was afraid that if her parents heard of the affair they would not allow her to ride a wheel any more. Cullane then locked Sherlin up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

that the result would be announced by a bulletin shortly after 9:30.

The last previous bulletin, issued at 8:45 p. m., was signed by Drs. Draper, McLane and Delafield. It said:

Mr. Vanderbilt had a comfortable day, and thus far is no worse than this morning.

This was not reassuring, coming as it did upon the early morning announcement that Mr. Vanderbilt had had a bad night and that his condition was not so good as it had been during Tuesday.

At 9 o'clock last night a rumor gained currency that Mr. Vanderbilt was dead, and the crowds of loiterers along Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue gaped more than ever at the windows of the massive pile of brick and stone opposite and discussed it excitedly. This rumor was set at rest by ex-Secretary Whitney, who said at 8:15: "Mr. Vanderbilt is not dead, or dying. If anything, he has gained in strength during the day."

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after the consultation from which issued the 3:30 bulletin, Dr. Janeway came out of the Vanderbilt residence, and after chatting for a moment on the corner with ex-Secretary Whitney, walked down the street.
