

From farthest Fiji to the Flanders fighting line, the descendants of the cannibals who fought Captain Cook in 1773, in 1915 are showing their loyalty to the British Empire. Doubleday, Page & Co

A German trench before Rheims dug through a farmhouse. The frame is formed by the opening made in the walls. Feature Photo Service

The automobile of Lloyd George, England's Minister of Munitions, is driven by Miss Marsh. Underwood & Underwood

Little Journeys with the Peace Jitney, or Fording the Trenches on a Busted Tire.

Barefooted Serbian women and children, fleeing before the invader, have left a trail of blood and death in the snow. Feature Photo Service

More like a ghost than a soldier. British soldier wearing the newest gas protector. Windham from Medem

War spares neither age nor sex. This twelve year old errand boy for a French regiment suffered a shattered jaw in the trenches. Windham from Medem

The Song of the Lute in a French hospital—"March on! March on! all hearts resolved on victory or death." Windham from Medem