

The United States Coast Guard cutter "Seneca" sinking her, which had drifted more

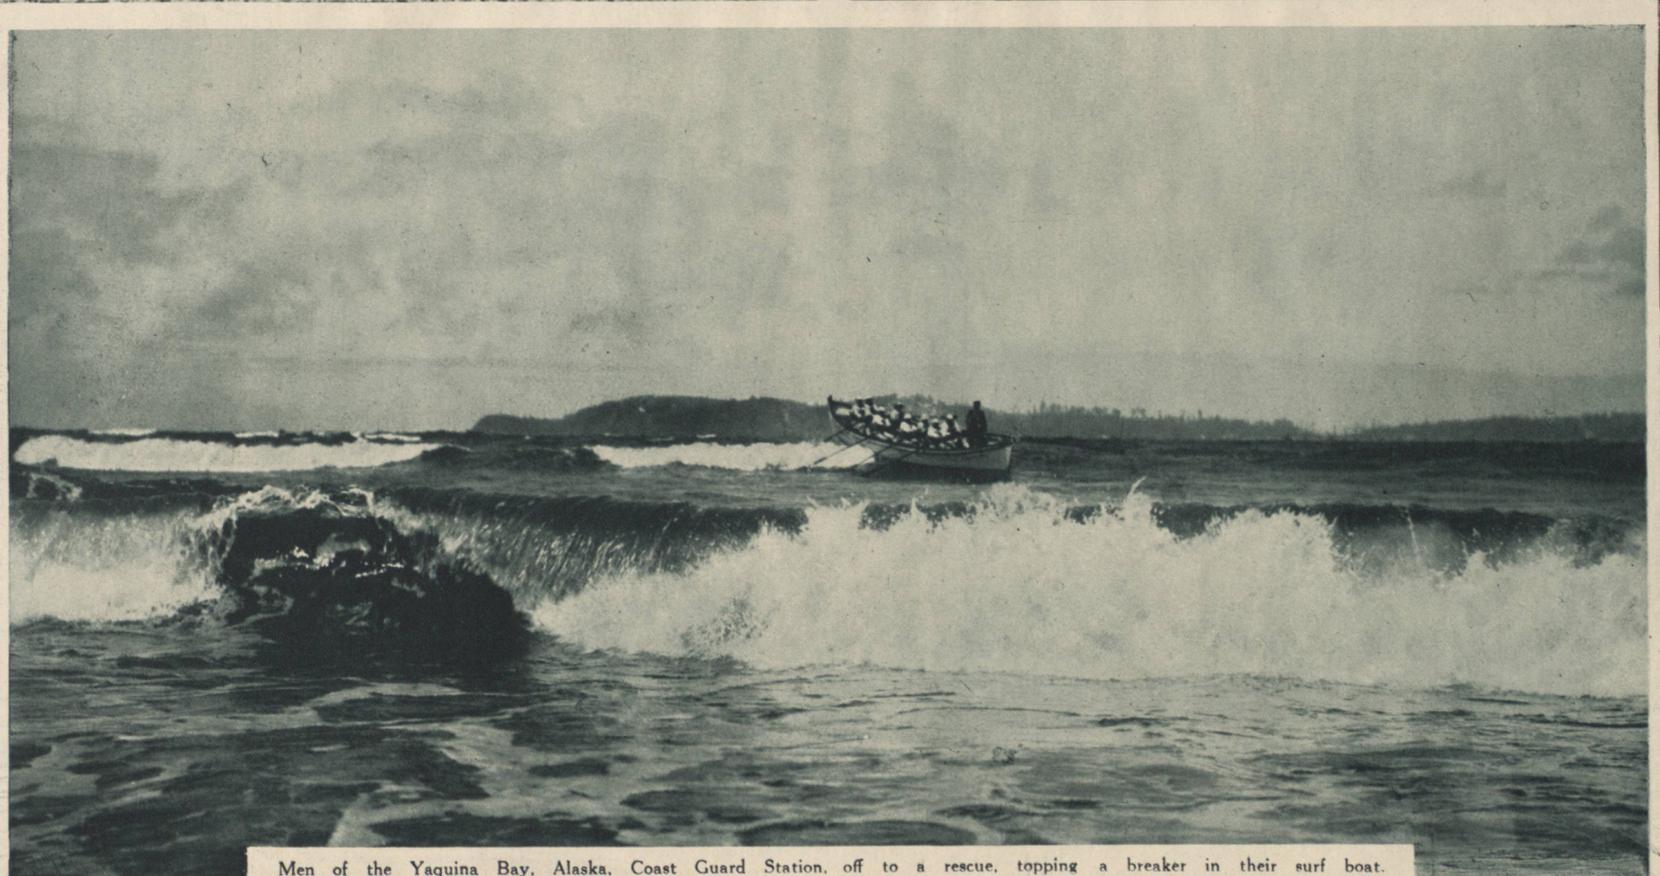

Unsung, the Coast Guardsmen Brave Winter Gales to Protect Mariners of All Nations throwing a line to a derelict, preparatory to than 1,500 miles in the Atlantic.

The Coast Guard cutter crews are often called on for land service. Here the crew of the "Woodbury" are fighting fire, near Portland, Maine.

The end of the roving of a derelict menace to navigation. A Coast Guard cutter mine has just exploded.

Men of the Yaquina Bay, Alaska, Coast Guard Station, off to a rescue, topping a breaker in their surf boat.