

One kind of uplift work. London department stores are employing women as elevator runners.

While man seems descending the scale and getting nearer the level of the tearing, rending brute, woman is going up and revealing to the world her capability and adaptability for performing the tasks of civilization.

The "White Aprons" are to Paris, bereft of men street cleaners, what the "White Wings" are to New York.

Berlin's woman postillion cracks her whip and handles her reins as cleverly as her man forbear.

Every Russian woman railway porter means a man has been released for service in the army.

When London's "Fluffies" are home on furlough there are wheel chairs and smiles for them.

Berlin, too, has her uniformed women elevator runners.
