

A Business Enterprise Which Solves the High Cost of Living Problem for New York's Women Workers

Greeley Photo Service

The Junior League Hotel for Women, at Seventy-eighth Street and East River, with accommodations for 326 persons. Rates for room and board from $4.50 to $7.50 a week.

A corner of the sunlit roof garden, swept by breezes in the summer.

A corner of the library. In addition there are an entertainment hall, public and private reception rooms, roof garden, outside porches and sewing and typewriting rooms.

One of the bedrooms. Steam heat, electric light, telephone, elevator and laundry are at the service of the patrons.

(Right to left) Miss Virginia Cogswell, manager; Allan Robinson, president, City and Suburban Homes Company, and Mrs. Willard D. Straight, chairman of the Junior League Committee.

The dining room, seating 326 persons. The idea back of the Junior League Hotel is to provide good living conditions for self-supporting women at reasonable rates and to give them agreeable surroundings without restraint of personal freedom.

