

The Sixth Field Artillery following in the wake of the cavalry in pursuit of Villa.

© Underwood & Underwood

Tracking Villa by Land and Air—Preparedness for the New York Business Man.

De Lloyd Thompson, who demonstrated how easy it would be for an aviator to drop bombs on the national capital.

© International News Service.

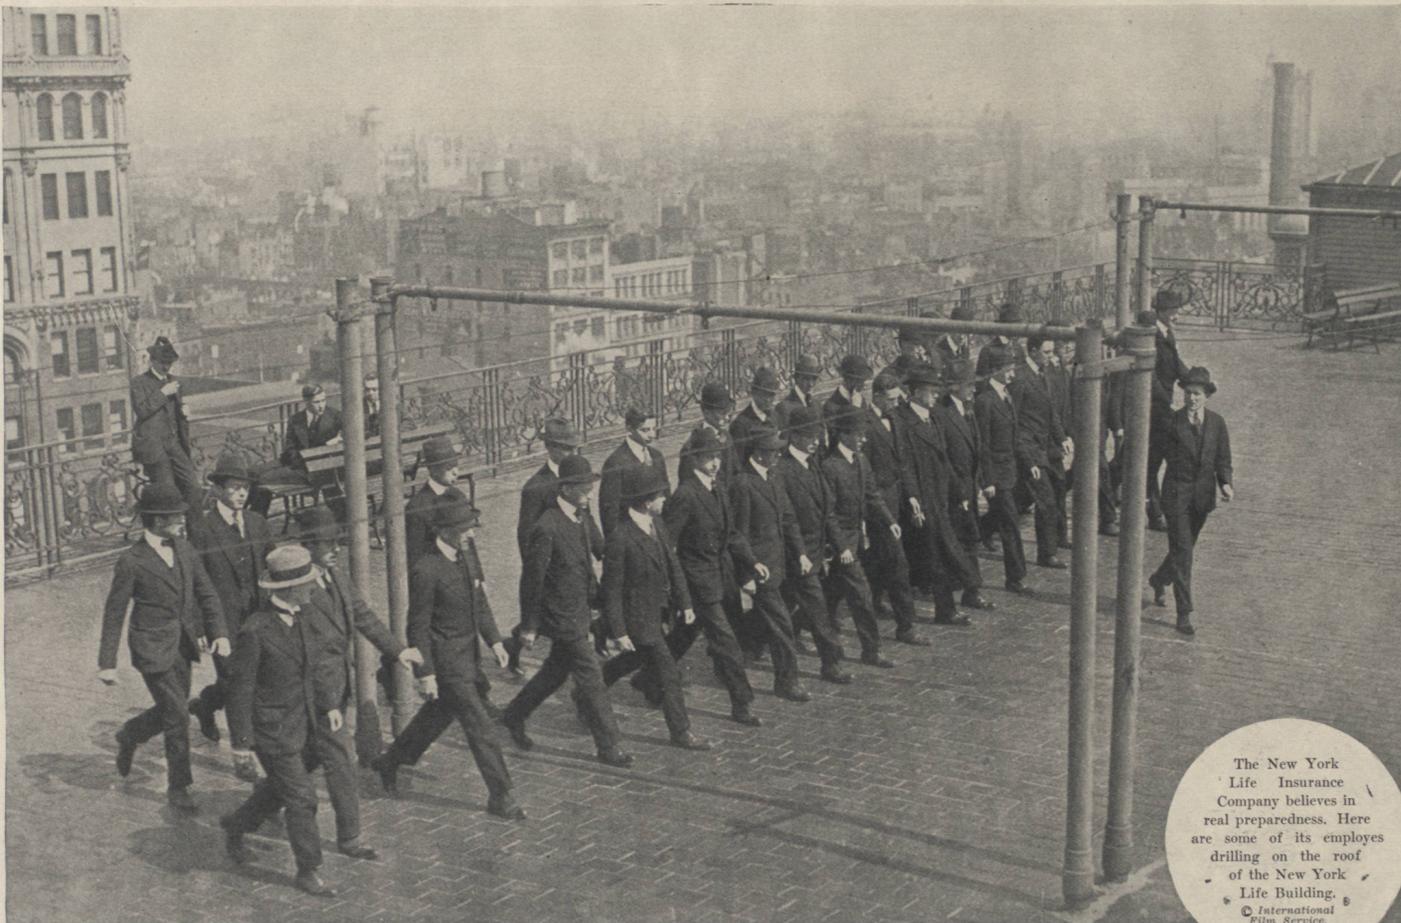

The traverse, shown by the loops and zigzags of De Lloyd Thompson's airship in his imitation bomb dropping flight over Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the National Security League.

© International Film Service.

Lieutenant Edgar S. Garrell (left) and Lieutenant Herbert A. Dargue, army aviators, who flew 330 miles in four hours with dispatches from San Antonio, Mexico, to Columbus.

© Underwood & Underwood.

The New York Life Insurance Company believes in real preparedness. Here are some of its employees drilling on the roof of the New York Life Building.

© International Film Service.

Victor M. Locke, of Antlers, Okla., head chief of the Choctaw Nation, who has enrolled for the Plattsburg Military Camp.

Photo by Harris & Ewing, from Paul Thompson.