HOTEL BELLECLAIRE
NEW YORK

Broadway at 77th St.
Surface Cars at Door
Subway at 79th St.

Only a few minutes from the Shopping and Theatrical District.

Among the many good hotels in New York, it will be generally conceded that THE BELLECLAIRE is well at the top of the list. It cannot entertain more than 300 people at a time, but it entertains all of them well. This number is a very small number out of the 300,000 people who are said to be entertained daily by the hotels and the room and boarding houses in New York City.

But there are 300 people who always want the kind of accommodations THE BELLECLAIRE furnishes—just as there are people who buy diamonds every day in the year. THE BELLECLAIRE supplies the diamonds in hotel service.

You must not infer, however, that the comparison we make means that prices are high at THE BELLECLAIRE, for they are not. The comparison merely indicates the quality.

$3.00 a day for a room with bath is not an extravagant price, is it?

An average cost of $1.00 each for three good meals a day is not extravagant, is it?

$5.00 a day for two people in a room is not extravagant, is it?

Three good meals a day served to two people at an average cost of $1.50 for the two ($4.50 for the three meals) is real economy in New York.

Of course you can spend more for meals, if you want to, for THE BELLECLAIRE'S menu gives you opportunity to order any dish you want.

The fanciest dishes—the most elaborate dinners—are prepared and served at THE BELLECLAIRE as well as at any hotel in New York—but we find that the majority of our guests prefer the simple, substantial, homelike dishes.

We have a chef who knows the entire gamut of cooking, who takes pride in his work—who is able to instil in his associates the same pride and interest—and thus there is an organization in the kitchen which sustains the fame of THE BELLECLAIRE as to the good and well-cooked food it serves.

THIS "B" has come to mean something.

Like any other good trade mark—STANDING FOR SOMETHING GOOD AND THAT MAKES GOOD—it has come to be known favorably.

Wherever it appears it is instantly identified with the HOTEL BELLECLAIRE, which is known to make good—with fine, large rooms, comfortably furnished and kept clean as wax—with a constantly sustained service of the highest order—with a food supply which is the best obtainable and which is always well prepared—with a fixed policy as to who shall be or shall not be entertained as guests, which is important in sustaining the character of the hotel—

with maintenance of environment which gives the Hotel its chief charm—its refined, homelike atmosphere—with consistent courtesy to guests from all the workers—from the manager and all others—a perfect working organization trained to the belief that courtesy is a great asset—a means to make and hold friends.

Of course, there are other hotels in New York splendidly managed, whose hospitality to guests has made the city famous. Hotel people generally understand the art of entertaining well. That is their business. They are trained to the work. They often give their guests a fine example of control and courtesy.
