

THE SEVENTH REACHES THE BORDER—The Color Guard of New York's crack infantry regiment just after detraining at McAllen, Tex.

With the Seventh in Texas, and the Militiamen Who Are on the Way

BATTERY B IN ACTION—Battery B. Captain Walter C. MacClure commanding, 1st Field Artillery, N. G. N. Y., left Van Cortland Park for McAllen, Tex., on July 4. When the marching order came Cupid took precedence over Mars.

Company B, 7th Regiment, in their car at McAllen, Tex. The 7th reached McAllen, Tex., on July 2, with the 71st and 14th regiments, also of the New York National Guard.

THE TWENTY-THIRD MARCHES AWAY—On July 4 the 23d Regiment, of Brooklyn, 2,200 strong, Colonel Frank H. Norton commanding, left New York to join the New York regiments already in Texas.

A general view of the 7th Regiment's camp near McAllen, Tex. Near it are also camped the 12th, 71st and 14th regiments, N. G. N. Y.

The 7th marching into its Texas camp near McAllen, Texas, on July 2. On July 4 it was joined by the 12th Regiment, N. G. N. Y.

THE SEVENTH'S FIRST DUTY IN TEXAS—On the way to McAllen men of the 7th were called on to help guard Pharr, Tex., following an incendiary fire which, it was feared, was the precursor of a Mexican raid.

Mess time in the Seventh's camp at McAllen, Tex.