AFGHAN SHARPSHOOTERS POSTED ON A CLIFF. This might be an official war photograph from the Ameer's own files, but it isn't. It is a wax and plaster miniature in the Brooklyn Children's Museum, executed on a scale of an inch to the foot, by Dwight Franklin. It is three feet high. The wax figures, about six inches tall, are on a cliff of plaster laid against a "sky" of painted galvanized iron.
