CHRISTMAS

"Our tree had more lights than yours." The cook's little nieces are brought in to see the tree.

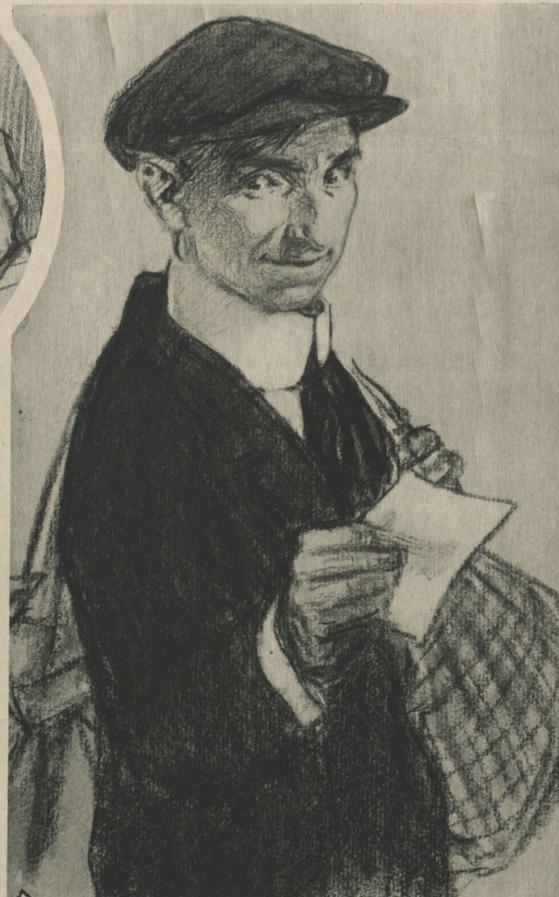

The present that wasn't expected. Looking for something to send back.

"My dear, you'd think that girl had nothing to do but stand there and be impertinent to me."

Picture editor trying to decide whether "Smoker's Heart" or "Pipe Dreams" is the snappiest title for the Christmas cover.

The laundry boy hands in a card which reads: "Christmas is here, with lots of joy. So don't forget the laundry boy."

Annie, the waitress, expected a fur neckpiece and got this.

Little girl who wants a vanity case for Christmas waiting while her parents look through the toy department.

The family gathering. Cousin Amy and Cousin Maud explaining why they haven't exchanged calls in a year. Neither is getting away with it.

The saleslady's Christmas morning.

Chorus lady who had expected to spend Christmas day motoring with Adolf sees notice of extra matinee on the call board and makes a few remarks.
