

Even the great mercantile establishments are cooperating with the government in the teaching of military tactics. Here is a portion of the employees of B. Altman's going thru a morning routine of exercises on the roof of their building.

Photo Greeley Service

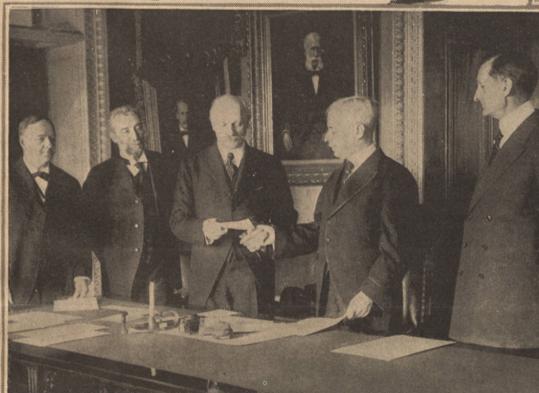

On the day when the President was to address Congress and call for a declaration of a state of war, a host of pacifists descended upon the Capital City to lend moral force to their stand against the action. Here is shown a group which took possession of the Capitol steps, before being dispersed by the police.

Photo Paul Thompson

Out at Forest Hills the citizens meet every Sunday morning in the quaint public square at the station for drilling under the supervision of regular army men.

Photo Greeley Service

The bit of paper which Secretary Lansing is handing to Constantin Brun, the Danish Minister represents 25,000,000 dollars in American gold, paid for the Virgin Islands. To the extreme right is Secretary McAdoo, and on the left are Secretary Daniels and Rear Admiral James H. Oliver, the newly appointed governor-general of the Islands.

Photo Paul Thompson

Here is the last session of the Russian Duma held before the provisional government was decided upon. In the president's chair can be seen M. Rodzianko, the President of the Duma and head of the new temporary regime.

Exclusive Photo Central News Service

Up in the air One of the workmen on the new 325 foot stacks of the New York Steam Power plant, swinging from a derrick high above the approach to the Brooklyn Bridge. In the background is the neighborly Woolworth tower.

Photo International Film Service

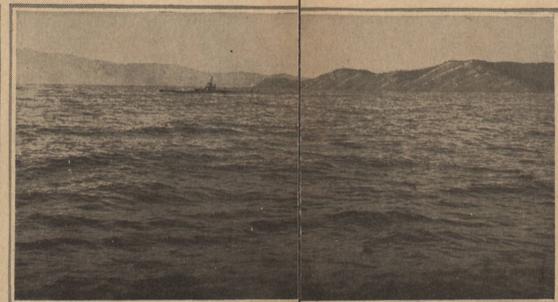

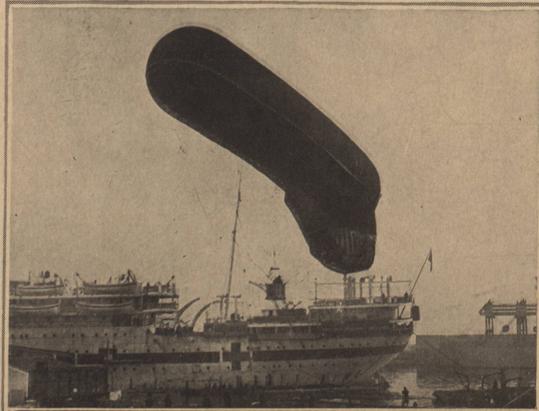

No Easter edition is complete without some representation of Easter lilies. Here is a field of them, photographed at Bermuda, where they were blossoming for the American market.

Photo Central News Service

Departing under unpublished orders for "Somewhere in New York." The 71st, the first of the Gotham regiments to be called for war duty, is shown on the march up Madison Avenue. They were sent to various points upstate to guard the aqueduct.

Photo Kugel & Herbert

Submarine-hunting along the French coast. The "Sausage" dirigible is towed out to sea, then sent forth with an observer in the basket to spy out periscopes. The middle view shows a distant U-boat just about to submerge hastily, while on the extreme right the balloon is seen at some distance from the mother-vessel. The observer sends news of his discoveries back by telephone or wireless.

The "Sausage" dirigible is towed out to sea, then sent forth with an observer in the basket to spy out periscopes. The middle view shows a distant U-boat just about to submerge hastily, while on the extreme right the balloon is seen at some distance from the mother-vessel. The observer sends news of his discoveries back by telephone or wireless.

Exclusive Photo Central News Service

Clearing the decks for heavy weather—the U. S. S. New York off Guantanamo, with the jacksies preparing for the oncoming hurricane.

Photo Central News Service

A glimpse of the thousands who succeeded in getting into the tabernacle of Billy Sunday to witness the dedication of the edifice. Hundreds were returned away after repeated efforts to hear Gov. Whitman, the evangelist himself, and others make their welcoming addresses.

Photo Greeley Service

When the enemy periscope suddenly bobs up and opens fire on a vessel, this is the deadly little gun which does the damage. The view is one of a quick firer, mounted on the deck of a U-boat, ready to shell the victim, as an aid to the torpedo which may be boring its way thru the water beneath the surface.

Photo Central News Service