

Woman's place will be on the crowded corners if hostilities drain the cities of men. Girls of the National Special Aid Society and Miss Alice M. Woodworth in particular are training to be traffic policemen in case of emergency.

Photo International Film Service

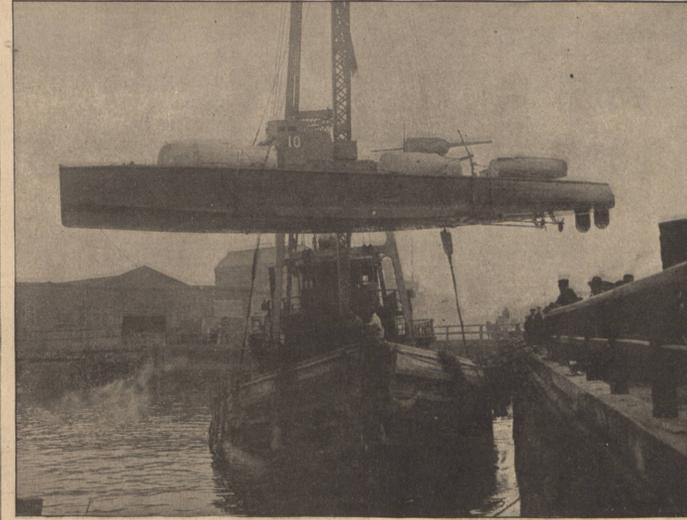

The British royal family entering St. George's Chapel at Windsor during the funeral of the late Duchess of Connaught. At the foot of the steps are seen Princess Arthur of Connaught, with the Prince and the Duke of Connaught, and following them are the King and Queen, with Queen Alexandra. At the end walk Prince Henry, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert.

Photo Central News Service

A unique camp on the French front. In the upper view are shown the tree tops, while below is the turf, the trunks and the roofing of boughs converting the whole wood into a kind of tent. Two soldiers who have climbed into the lower branches are shown in the top view.

Photo Helen Powell

The new submarine chasers for the American Navy can easily be carried on shipboard and launched near the scene of duty. Incidentally, the details of construction of the "mosquitoes" are excellently displayed as the little craft swings high above the water.

Photo M. Rosenfeld

Any bachelor uncle will aver that there is no age limit when femininity may begin its influence on the male. Here is four-year-old Jane Lee in active service as a recruiting officer. She distributes circulars in so engaging a manner that she cannot be refused.

Photo Kadet & Herbert

There is food aplenty in France, we hear, but coal is scarce. Here is a line of citizens waiting outside the Paris Opera to get their daily rations of fuel. No social rank is above holding a place for hours with basket on arm.

Photo Kadet & Herbert

"The Temptation of St. Anthony" is the caption appended to this Cubist masterpiece, which has drawn much comment at the Independent Artists' Exhibition at Grand Central Palace since the opening last Monday. The temptation to the spectator is unexpressed.

Photo M. W. Stewart

Three of the students at Barnard College who are taking part in this year's edition of the annual Greek games held by the two lower classes.

Photo Ira L. Hill

A delicate operation now becoming a familiar matter in the French field hospitals—grafting skin from the leg of one soldier to another who has been severely wounded by flying shell-fragments. The two patients are strapped together until the transfer is completed.

Photo J. Sullivan

When the Jones bill passed Congress, giving citizenship to the Porto Ricans, the entire island joined in jubilation. Above is shown the parade of school children at San Juan, marching past the local Y. M. C. A.

Photo Underwood & Underwood

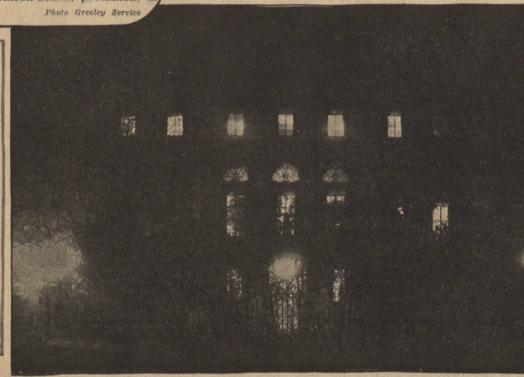

A division of the National League for Woman's Service photographed at they attended Billy Sunday's Tabernacle in a body. The French soldier-guest is Jean Michelle, of the 112th French Infantry, here on a furlough. To the right of him is seen Miss Gertrude Robinson-Smith, prominent in working-women's philanthropic movements.

Photo Greeley Service

Two interesting nocturnes of luxurious homes which have turned over to the army for hospitals. To the left is the "Petit Trianon," the marble palace of the Duchess of Talleyrand, formerly Miss Anna Gould, situated in the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, Paris. The view on the right is that of Dorchester House, in Park Lane, London, the old home of the former American Ambassador, White Van Reid.

Photos W. M. ...

"Swinging Around the Circle." The first battalion of the Naval Militia on their way to Federal service are seen passing through Columbus Circle after leaving the Granite State, their training ship home.

Photo Underwood & Underwood