No Other Instrument Has Ever Stood Such a Test!

SIDE by side they performed from the stage of the music room of the Hotel Biltmore of New York—Leopold Godowsky, premier concert pianist of America, and the Ampico. And when this remarkable "comparison concert" was over, the Ampico had proved beyond question that a genuine reproducing piano had at last been perfected. Tone for tone and phrase for phrase the Ampico's performance duplicated that of the artist himself.

Can you imagine a more severe test? Think, too, of what it means when an artist of Godowsky's standing consents to participate in a public comparison of his art with a "player piano."

As a matter of fact, the Ampico is not a "player piano" in the ordinary sense, but a new invention of infinitely greater artistic possibilities—an invention that mirrors the most intimate characteristics of the great pianists' playing and reproduces their interpretations exactly as if they were playing your own piano.

The Ampico may be used as the regular piano for playing manually and also as the player piano, using any standard 88-note roll.

There is a new white satin abroad in Paris, a satin which is neither ivory, nor beige, nor oyster white, but a sort of silvery suggestion of all three. Since the evening gown is "forbid to grow" on Paris soil, they combine it, as Paquin has done, with black satin in afternoon costumes.
