

Society Turns to Church and Charity

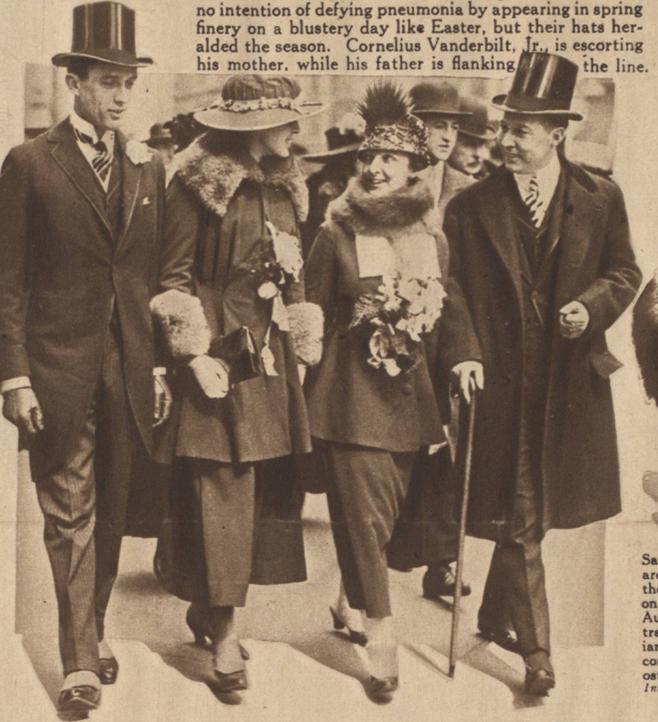

Like mother, like daughter; Mrs. William Lowe Rice shows her appreciation of the severe tailleur, even to the hat, in the costumes she and her daughter are wearing to church. Greeley Photo Service.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her daughter Grace had no intention of defying pneumonia by appearing in spring finery on a blustery day like Easter, but their hats heralded the season. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is escorting his mother, while his father is flanking the line. M. Rosenfeld.

Allen G. Wellman looks as if being wounded might not be so bad after all, if Dorothy Brown was the Red Cross nurse as she was at the entertainment given the day before Easter by Mrs. George J. Gould at Lakewood for the American Red Cross. Kadel & Herbert.

Love will find a way, and Miss Vera Cravath's friends, Mr. and Mrs. John M. P. Thatcher, are congratulating her on Cupid's conquest. The happy man, Mr. James S. Larkin, looking a bit self-conscious, is at the extreme left. M. Rosenfeld.

Satin frocks and furs are very much en vogue these first warm days on the Avenue. Mrs. Austen Gray, who is a transplanted Bostonian, has topped this combination with an ostrich trimmed hat. International Film Service.

Now that Mrs. Charles DeL. Oelrichs has set the stamp of approval on waistcoats with dark cloth suits, we tip off all masculines to keep theirs under lock and key. Kadel & Herbert.

All Sorts and Conditions of Youngsters

Victor Rothschild, son of the Hon. and Mrs. N. Charles Rothschild of the great Paris

Slightly perturbed because he has no home, rather than because he will not inherit a fortune, this nameless child has found safety with the British forces in Macedonia. Photo Underwood & Underwood.
