

John D. Rockefeller Jr's famous Sunday school class at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. This organization, one

HERE AND THERE

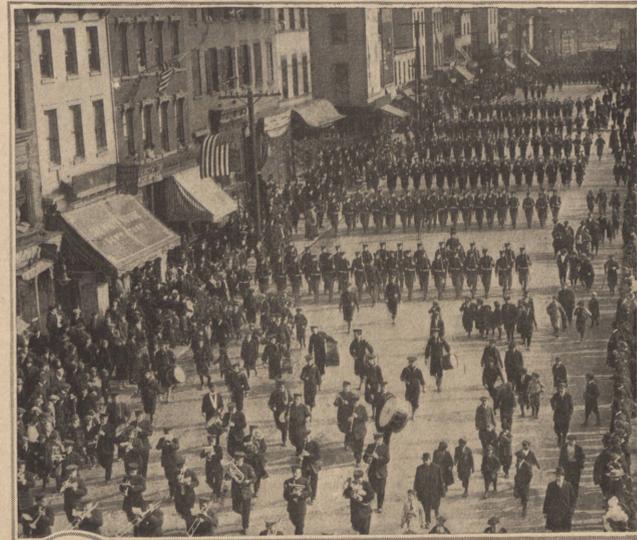

The cream of the week's news in pictures of the best known in the world, marched last Sunday in a body to attend the services at Billy Sunday's Tabernacle.

"Primitive Man," an heroic piece of work lately completed by Beniamino Bufano, who achieved more than slight distinction in connection with his bas-reliefs at the San Francisco Fair.

Photo B. Bufano.

"While We Were Marching Thru Brooklyn," might have been sung by the boys of the 2d Battalion of the N. Y. Naval Militia as they passed thru Bridge Street (seen above) on their way to Federal duty.

Photo Paul-Thompson

A scene at the citadel in Frederiksvort, V. I. U. S., just as the American colors were flung to the breeze

Photo G. Underwood & Underwood

Woman will not doff her Paris bonnet to any man, even when it comes to flying. Here is a group from the Women's Military Reserve, busy at lessons in aviation, as it is being taught them at the Sheepshead race track. When graduated, they will fly for the U. S.

Photo G. Underwood & Underwood

In marked contrast to the giant shown opposite, this "Laughing Child," also the work of Mr. Bufano, shows the sculptor at his best in delicacy and lightness. His fondness for Oriental subjects is betrayed by the features and the base-decoration.

Photo B. Bufano.

Miss Edwardina Lavoie, the only known woman bugler in the National

The Military Corps of the Stuyvesant High School formally accepts the statue of "The Minute Man," awarded them by General George W. Wingate for excellence in marksmanship, drill, etc. The gift was presented by Mr. S. R. Guggenheim, in Washington Square.

Photo American Press Assn.

Guard. She is a member of the first Field Artillery of the New York Guard.

Photo Guggenheim Service

Here are the eighteen naval gunners who, with the American liner, St. Louis, ran the gantlet of German U-boats and returned safely to New York. They are now engaged in aiding navy recruiting in various parts of the city.

Photo G. Underwood & Underwood

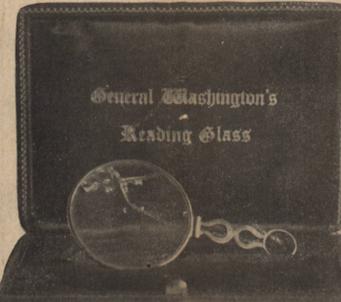

One way to rush recruiting. Two fair daughters of Cincinnati have volunteered to give a real American kiss to every man who enlists, the moment he signs the application. One of them, Miss Gertrude Douglas, is caught in the act of rewarding a new recruit to the First Field Hospital Corps.

A German visiting-card left at Peronne. It is a sign hung high in the ruins with the legend, "Don't get angry, just marvel." A fitting exponent of the invaders' point of view.

Photo Madam.

Washington wrote, "My eyes have grown dim in the service of my country," after he had taken to the aid of this reading-glass in going thru his books. This valuable relic was sold last Thursday at auction at the Anderson Galleries, with the collection belonging to William Lanier Washington.

Photo Anderson Galleries

To the left are a few of the hundreds of girls employed in the Eddystone ammunition plant, near Chester, Pa., being held back by troops after the explosion in which many others lost their lives.

Photo G. Underwood & Underwood

The First Lady of China and her family—the wife of President Li Yuan-Hung, with her two sons and two daughters, dressed in the national ceremonial costume.

Photo G. Underwood & Underwood