

Distress signals from Joe, who is dancing for the seventh successive time with his sister and wants one of the stags to cut in.

The tactful girl who asks Mr. Shad why he never joined a fraternity.

AMONG US MORTALS
Drawn by W. E. HILL
THE SENIOR
"HOP"

Four girls having declined, Shorty was up against it till his sister, at school, hit upon the happy idea of sending her roommate, a "perfectly corking girl" whom Shorty had never seen.

Two of the faculty wives having the time of their lives pulling Mrs. Prexy to pieces.

The conscientious freshman, who always dances with all the patronesses, finishes the evening's work with the Greek professor's wife, who hasn't danced since long before the two-step went out of vogue.

The dean's wife cornering some one to come over and meet the visiting peach whom she has been press agenting for the last two months.

The house-party chaperon, who calls everybody "honey boy" and is always kissing some one. Not over popular with the girls.

Brother Simms, whose girl couldn't come at the last moment. He has been drowning his sorrows and now insists on going up to the house-party and serenading the chaperons.

Bill, showing his girl and her mother around the town, encounters Bessie, of the Telephone Exchange, who had expected to be asked to the fraternity house-party and would now like to tell him a few things. Bill hastens to point out the view in the opposite direction.