

Mrs. Vernon Castle, in spite of bobbed hair and other of youth's attributes, easily achieves a delightful effect of stateliness when she appears in the particular gown, of Faibisy design, with its graceful Grecian lines. It is of heavy silk, emerald green with silver and gold brocadings.
Central News Photo Service.

We call them, for want of a better name, garden party clothes, though many are the occasions for which they are suitable. On the left is a canary colored net frock with threaded design in heavy corded silk, made over a slip of cream white silk crepe. A white Georgette and lace affair comes next, and is followed by a gown of cream white net and point de Venise over white silk crepe. Rust brown net and cream lace flouncing make the frock on the right the attractive thing it shows itself to be. It is girdled with ribbon, brown on one side and rose on the other.

From Franklin Simon & Co. Photo by Jodi Feder.

Merely a blue smock and a white skirt, but glorified by reason of composition—crepe de chine and silk brocade, respectively—into a most pleasing afternoon costume.
From Lane Bryant. Photo by Fashion Camera.

There's a strangely familiar look about her—where? Why, it's Gaby Deslys—Gaby, sans headdress and clad in simple sport things, but still her own charming self. She is now appearing in London's new musical comedy, "Suzette."
Photo by E. O. Hoppe.

Norma Talmadge has picked a winner in her sports suit, a combination soldier's jacket and cape with matching skirt of U. S. A. khaki-colored Khaki-kool. Hickson has added a cap of the same material. Could you imagine a more appropriate costume for the races at Saratoga or for that memorable yachting excursion?

Lucille designed it, this stunning black and silver costume, and Doroles, of the Ziegfeld Follies, wears it, along with a silver headdress. Yes, this is Doroles.
Photo by Johnson.

So long as net evening gowns can be such delightful, yet unpretentious affairs as this all white one, just so long will they charm.
Courtesy E. & Z. Van Raalte.

