

Hundreds of naval recruits are filling these reserve ships of our Atlantic fleet docked in the Boston Navy Yard.

Brown & Dawson

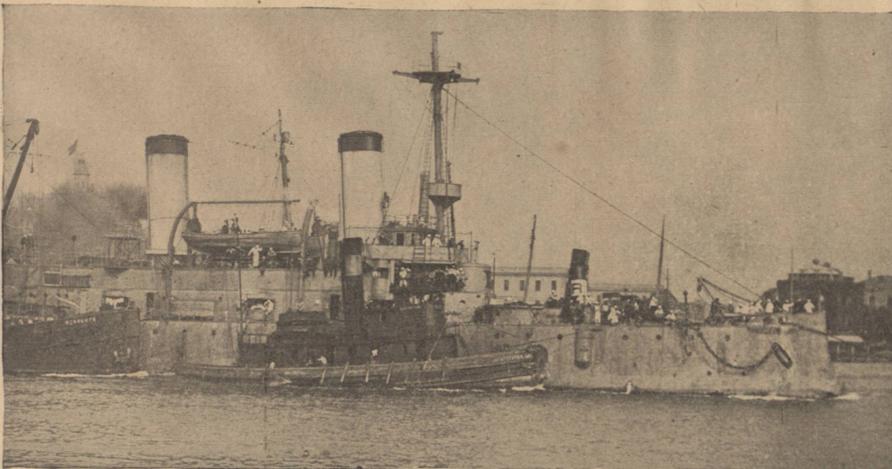

Below—The U. S. Cruiser Olympia is towed through Long Island Sound after having been floated from the rocks at Block Island. Dewey's old flagship will doubtless soon be ready again for active service.

Underwood & Underwood

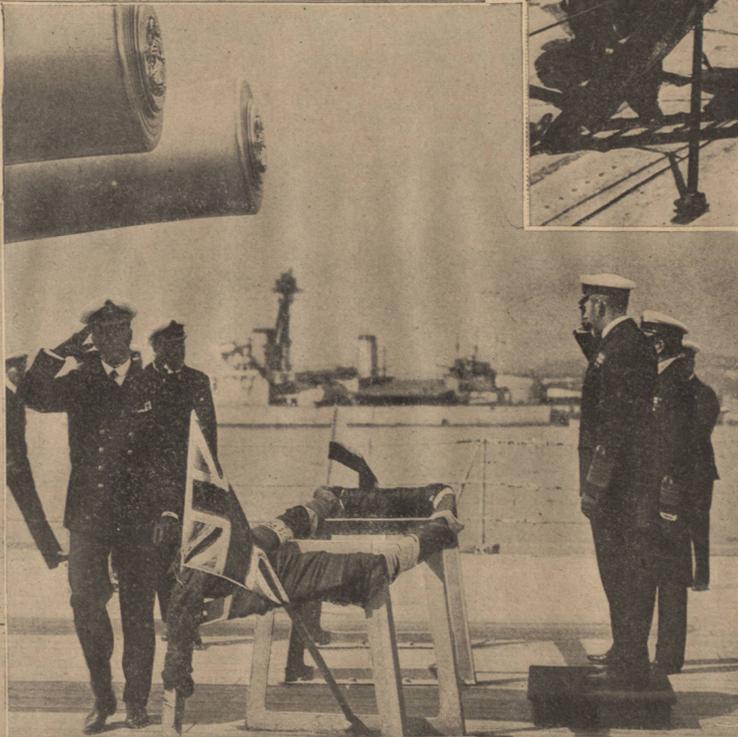

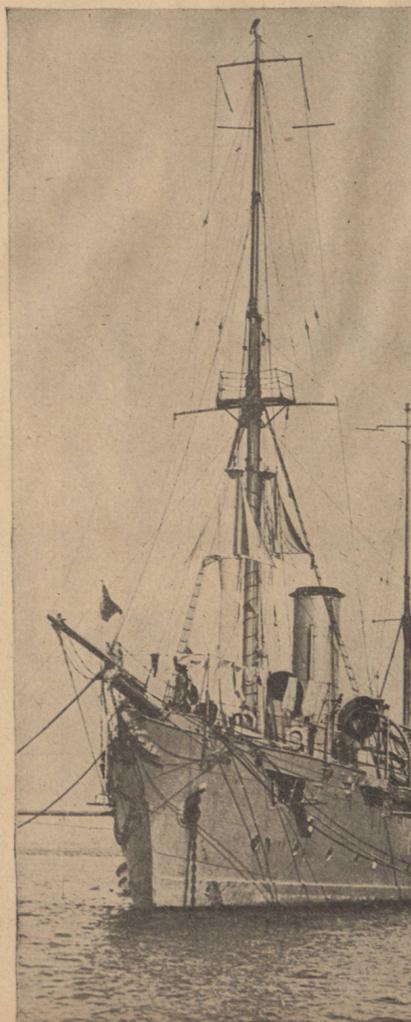

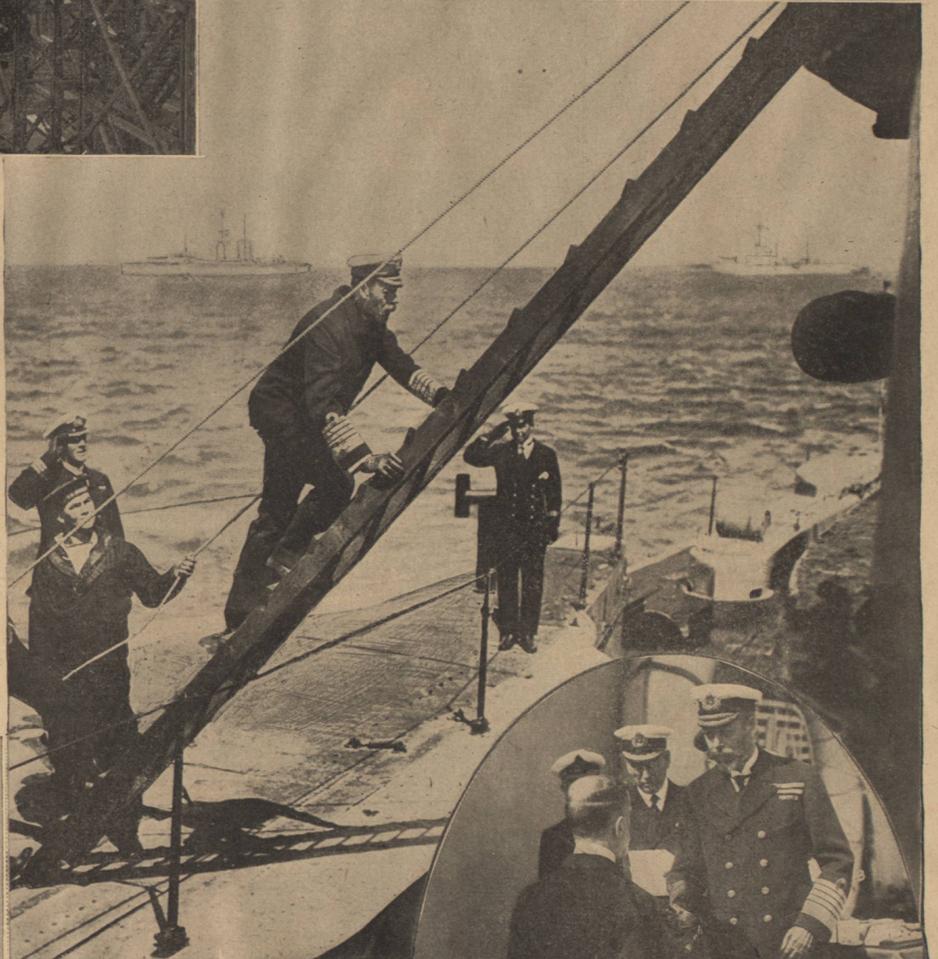

A German plane comes down nose first in the North Sea, catches fire and is slowly consumed. Perhaps this is one of the baby killers returning from a London raid.

Official Press Bureau

Below—Two British submarines and their mother ship visit San Diego, California, participating in the patriotic program there July 4th. This little flotilla forms part of the British patrol along the Pacific coast.

Central News

Three remarkable photos of His Majesty George V, visiting the British Grand Fleet. Above, the King boards a battleship after inspecting a submarine. On the left the officers of H. M. S. pass in review before the King. On the right an unusual picture of an investiture on shipboard; the King knighting Vice-Admiral Pakenham. The King, striking the new knight's shoulder with his sword, wears the uniform of an admiral of the fleet.

Central News

On the right—German air scout clambering aboard a U-boat, bringing news of the approach of another torpedo victim.

Official Press Bureau