

Italian soldiers at an altitude of 11,000 feet bringing up supplies to their outposts on the Austrian front. In a series of powerful attacks the Italians have made a marked advance in this sector in spite of the climatic difficulties.

Kadel & Herbert.

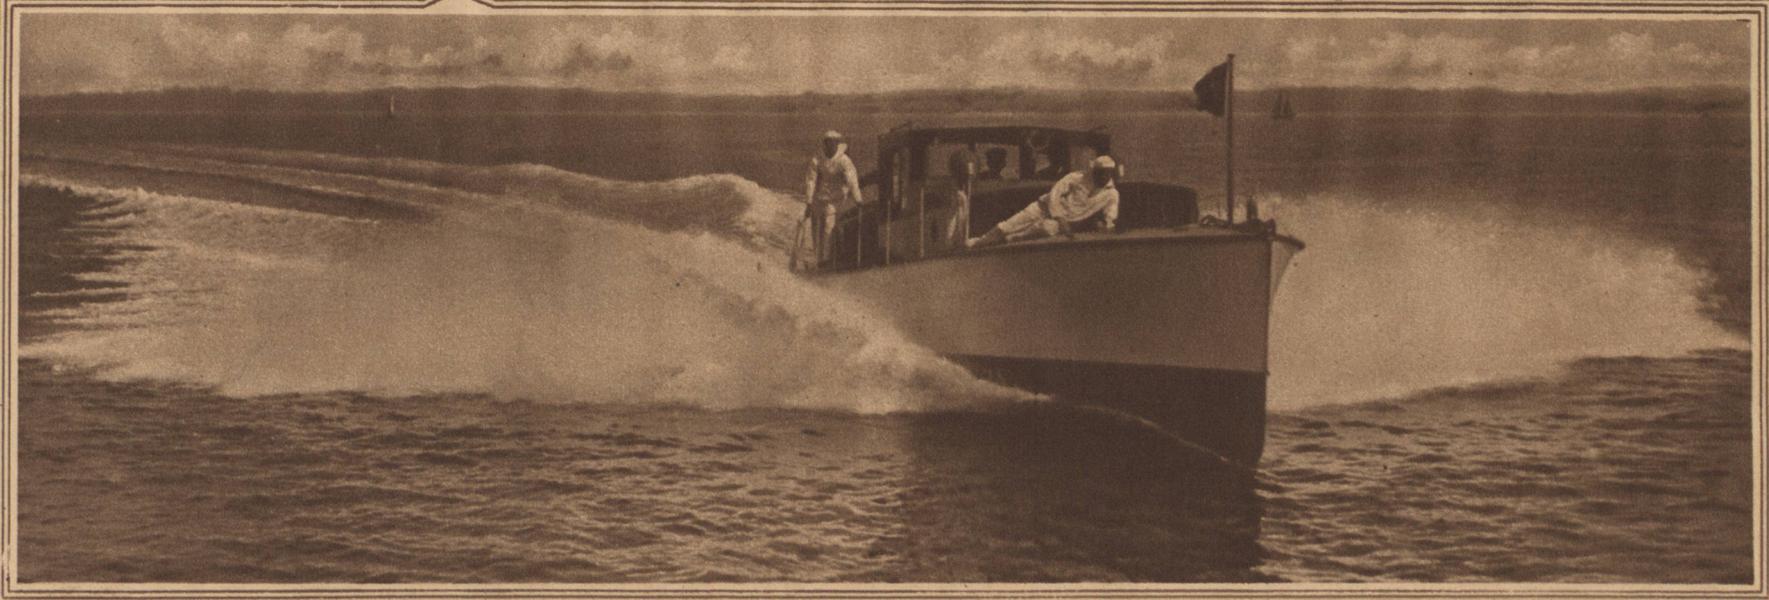

Squadron of Italian cavalry operating at the base of the Alps. It takes eternal vigilance, say their reports to the War Office, to repulse the repeated attacks on their outposts.

Kadel & Herbert.

An unusual photograph of Dewey's old flagship, the U. S. S. Olympia, of Manila Bay fame, photographed in drydock somewhere on the Atlantic seaboard. She was damaged last summer, when she ran aground at Block Island. This picture was personally censored by Secretary Daniels.

© Burnett Poole.

This 53-foot motor boat is equipped with a new gasoline engine designed by an American, C. D. Harris, to outspeed the U-boat. It was photographed on the Sound the other day while being tested by experts of the various Allies. It develops 400 h. p. and makes 41 miles per hour, against the present maximum of 21 of a submarine chaser, taking up but a fraction of the space.

Rosenfeld.