

Florence Reed's Oriental appearance is admirably adapted to the tempestuous rôle of the desert woman in "Chu Chin Chow," the play of ancient Bagdad. Incidentally, the part calls for an actress capable of a few murders here and there as the piece progresses.

Left—Grace George as she appears in "Eve's Daughter," the first of the three plays which she has spent a year in selecting for her repertory season at The Playhouse. This play of modern English life was written by Alicia Ramsey.

Left—Frank Tinney and Virginia Fisinger, two of the star attractions in "Doing Our Bit" at the Winter Garden. The production has seventeen scenes full of spectacular effects and is rich in color, chorus and fun.

Jane Grey and Vincent Serrano, as the pair of successful swindlers in "De Luxe Annie," which the critics call the cleverest psychological play since "Seven Keys to Baldpate."
