

AMONG US MORTALS AFTER THE WAR

By W. E. Hill

Elisha T. Zinn, the multimillionaire who prophesies a great spiritual rebirth after the war, in which Socialism and the I. W. W. will meet their downfall, leaving the capitalist supreme.

The Rev. Timothy Magnus sees coming a great spiritual rebirth after the war, in which the Church will gain in power to an unheard of degree. (Especially the Rev. Timothy's sect.)

Alberta Bowe, very free thinker, is Mrs. Perry Cobbe in private life, but prefers to express her individuality by retaining her maiden name. Alberta foresees a great spiritual rebirth after the war, in which capital will be overthrown and Socialism will reign supreme.

Mrs. Christobelle Cowie, club-woman and New Thought leader, who foretells a great spiritual rebirth after the war. All existing creeds will receive their deathknell, and New Thought will take their place.

Mrs. Willie Margin and Mrs. Oliver Gold-Band both agree that the men returning after the war will simply be ruined socially. "My dear, after so much excitement they will never be satisfied with dinner dances and teas!"

Gladys' family all agree that the war has done wonders in developing Gladys. "It has made her think." After the war, when the losses are reckoned up, there will always be this cheering thought—it has developed Gladys and made her think. The accompanying sketch shows Gladys thinking.

Louis Beckmer, the Bolshevik orator, draped for protection's sake in an American flag, predicts a great something or other in the way of a revolution after the war, in which the government, the capitalists, Socialism and everything but Louis will crumble away.

Last but not least, there is Mrs. Brown, who doesn't get much time to worry about "after the war."

with two boys in the war and the household to look after. Here's to Mrs. Brown.

As for Ethel Crocker-Crocker, divorcée, well, she just doesn't see how she can ever go back to the trivial things of life after the war—not so hard as it seems, for Ethel hasn't given up any of the trivial things.
