Attired in the conventional garb of office, women are doing men's work in the great railroad shops.

The girl behind the machine that is making our army and navy officers look so handsome.

Then there are the police officers—very alert and up-to-the-minute.

These husky young lumberjacks are doing valiant war service. No tree is too tough.

Among the tasks formerly handled by men is the task of shoemaking.

Here we see the postwoman who has become a familiar personage at the National capital.

They have proved a special aptitude at "guarding" on the B. R. T.

The laundry woman has also put in an appearance—every bit as capable as her predecessor, who is now in France.

In a week this girl munition worker became an experienced hand.
