

The Cameron sisters, who put the Oriental across in dashing style.

"Little Simplicity"

Now at the 44th Street Theatre

Henry Vincent and the Cameron sisters. It's a case of not being able to resist either one.

Carolyn Thompson and Carl Gantvoort proving that the old, old story still goes big.

Stewart Baird, Marjorie Gateson and Walter Catlett. Isn't it wonderful to be so popular?

Hugh Chivers and Polly Pryor. It looks quite tragic, but everything ends happily.

This is the second act finale, by which time, of course, you are perfectly sure which is the prettiest girl, and perhaps you have even decided to drop in again some evening.
