

Above. — The superdreadnoughts in single file steaming past Miss Liberty on their way to anchorage up the Hudson, as seen from an airplane. Photo by Levick.

Left.—Admiral William T. Mayo, whose blue flag flies from the Pennsylvania, flagship of the mighty fleet. Tribune Photo.

Our Overseas Battle Fleet drops anchor in the Hudson

The Atlantic battleship fleet is home again. Here are the twelve great first line fighting ships that are paying Father Knickerbocker a two weeks' visit. Over a hundred of Uncle Sam's grim sea warriors gray the North River, while their 30,000 sailormen are given the freedom of the city in a royal welcome home.

The Battleship ARKANSAS. Tribune Photo

The Battleship NEW YORK, flagship of Rear Admiral A. Rodman. Tribune Photo

The Battleship FLORIDA. Tribune Photo

The bargeload of gobs come ashore from the Pennsylvania.

The Battleship TEXAS. Tribune Photo

The Battleship OKLAHOMA. Tribune Photo

The Battleship DELAWARE. Tribune Photo

The Battleship UTAH, flagship of Rear Admiral E. W. Eberle. Tribune Photo

The Battleship NEVADA. Tribune Photo

The Battleship PENNSYLVANIA, flagship of Admiral Mayo. Tribune Photo

The Battleship WYOMING, flagship of Rear Admiral R. E. Coontz. Tribune Photo

The Battleship NORTH DAKOTA. Tribune Photo

The Battleship Mississippi leading the fleet into the harbor, as photographed from an airplane. Note the airplanes atop the forward and aft turrets. Photo by Levick.