

Victory Way by night is an avenue of beauty, brilliantly festooned with lights.
Photo by Doris Yaeger, of the Women's Camera Club

When Hun helmets are built into a pyramid and lighted like this they are indeed a fitting symbol for New York's Victory Way.
Photo by Doris Yaeger, of the Women's Camera Club

Looking from the bridge of the U. S. A. Brooklyn over the ice-filled waters of Golden Horn Bay at Vladivostok to the U. S. transport Sheridan, listing to starboard with a shifting of her cargo.
Paul Thompson

The stately columns and splendid eagles of Victory Way, gleaming white in the evening illumination.
Photo by Adelaide Wallach Ehrlich of the Women's Camera Club

Over the top of the very continent goes this intrepid Victory Loan tank, ploughing through drifts of snow as it clammers up some 12,000 feet to the top of Pike's Peak.

Whatever continuous rains may have made of Brest underfoot, from this French dirigible the huge embarkation camp of Pontanezen is a city of immaculate neatness. During the month of March more than 117,350 returning American soldier sons passed through the camp, the largest of its kind in the world.
International Film Service