SKIRTS of QUALITY

Nothing can oust the separate skirt from the modern wardrobe, and this Fall it is more in evidence than ever.

Nowadays you can find a skirt suited to almost every occasion. For sport or street wear, what could be smarter than the nobby wool plaid model shown at the right, with its clever bias-cut pockets revealed between the boxpleats? This skirt gives the slim silhouette, yet is wide enough for real comfort.

And then, for dress, imagine the draped satin skirt worn with a blouse of the same color. At once you have a charming costume.

These are but typical of the endless variety of styles and materials found in the showrooms of can have just as much style as higher priced models, as is proved conclusively by the two frocks photographed.

Tricotine was used for developing the model on the left, which shows the newest combination of vest effect and pannier tunic, with buttons and a braided girdle to furnish adornment; while that on the right, of French serge, exploits a very new side drapery, the tunic being really cut in one with the skirt. Soutache braiding adds a decorative touch.
