

Right—A quartette of stage luminaries at the A. E. A. Ball at the Astor. Left to right—Marion Coakley, Helen MacKellar, Sue McNamany and Fania Marinoff. Underwood

Above and to the right—Three close-ups of the Prince of Wales taken while addressing and receiving the cheers of 40,000 war veterans at the Toronto ceremonies held in his honor. Underwood

Above in oval—The Prince of Wales poses in civies for some fair Quebec lassies just outside a church in Ottawa during his visit to the Canadian capital. Central News

Left—The ex-Kaiser's famous yacht Meteor, which together with many other personal belongings of William Hohenzollern was recently sold at auction by officers of the new German Republic. Associated Press

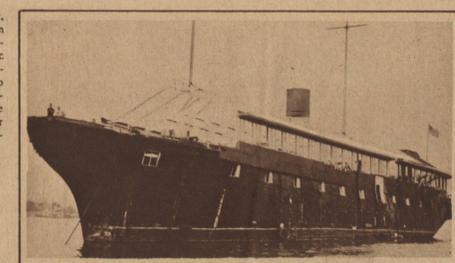

Major Orde Lees daringly demonstrates the "Guardian Angel" parachute by leaping from a seaplane flying 250 feet above New York Bay. Above photograph shows Major Lees descending in his parachute with the plane flying close up to the Statue of Liberty. Photograph on the left shows Major Lees just after he had landed in the water and waiting for a police boat to come to his rescue. L. Curtis, International

Admiral Albert Gleaves, aboard the U. S. S. Dakota, unfurls his flag as full admiral and assumes command of the Asiatic Fleet—an impressive Labor Day ceremony in the North River. Graphic News

A surrendered U-boat, credited with sixteen Allied sinkings, on exhibition at the Panama Canal, en route to San Diego, Cal. Curious residents of the Canal Zone get their first glimpse of a former undersea pirate. Underwood

The U. S. S. Richmond, famous flagship of Admiral Farragut in the Civil War, being towed from Norfolk to Philadelphia, where she is to be broken up and sold as junk. Ledger Photo

Right—Mr. and Mrs. King Swope, of Kentucky. The youthful Mr. Swope is the first returned soldier to be elected to Congress. Pretty Mrs. Swope has attracted a great deal of favorable attention in Washington, her husband's spectacular campaign victory placing them both in the limelight. Post Tribune

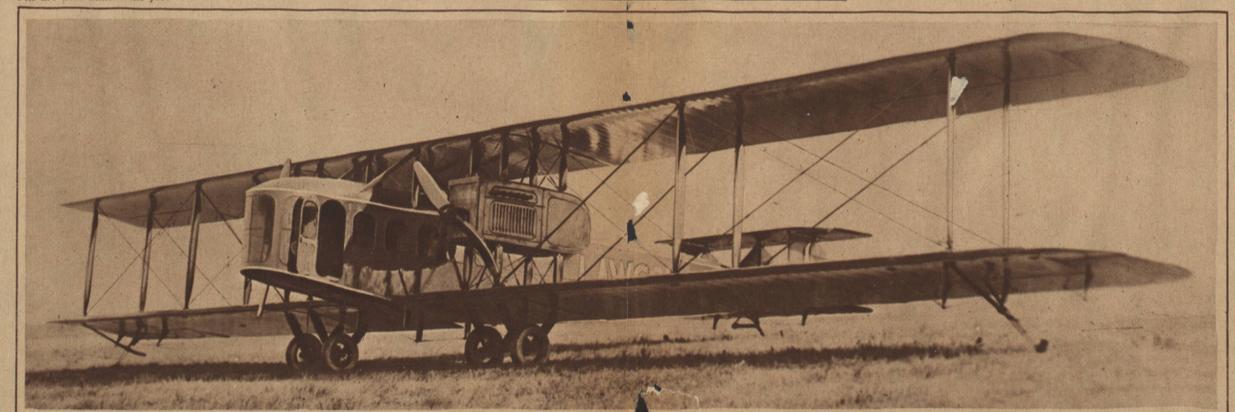

The photographer was right on the job when Sir General Frederick Shaw, Commander in Chief of the British forces in Ireland, was thrown from his horse during the great peace celebrations in Belfast. Reptone View Company

Left—The living kewpie dolls in the great Asbury Park baby parade, an annual feature of this popular Jersey coast resort. Post Tribune

Dorothy Dalton, of movie fame, carried $100,000 insurance when she flew over Broadway the other day in a seaplane, from which she dropped free theatre tickets. P. J. R.

This city fireman believes cleanliness is next to godliness and spreads the gospel in a practical way by distributing soap to east side urchins. His fire hose finishes the job. Graphic News

Left—These ships, former mine layers of the German navy, are now being used to sweep the North Sea of the mines they once laid. Note that the merchant flag of Germany has replaced the naval ensign. Reptone View Company

The "Millionaire Special," a 26-passenger aeroplane, arrives in Chicago from Milwaukee, making the 100-mile flight in 58 minutes. It is expected the plane will soon leave for New York, where it will take on passengers for a flight to San Francisco. The ship is equipped with every modern convenience for aerial passenger transportation. Underwood

Right—Sixteen German U-boats, stripped of their torpedoes and armament, tied up at a dock in the Kiel Canal preparatory to being turned over to the British navy under the terms of the armistice. Reptone View Company

