

NEW YORK
The Electrical City

The myriad lights of the Equitable, largest of all office buildings; the glowing pinnacle of the Singer Building, the brilliant Woolworth Tower, the sparkling dome of the World Building are all high lights that help to make this night photograph of lower Manhattan's illuminated skyline, as viewed from Brooklyn Bridge, one of unusual beauty and interest.

Left — The Williamsburg Bridge looms out of the night like a string of giant pearls stretched across the East River when the powerful arcs are turned on.

A little bit of fairyland. The fountain in Central Park, aglow from powerful searchlights.

One of New York's architectural classics illuminated for a Liberty Loan drive—the Fifth Avenue Public Library.

Photos Courtesy New York Edison Company and Tucker Agency, 363 Fifth Avenue, New York City