

A new portrait of Mr. John William Davis, the American Ambassador to England. Although Mr. Davis has been overseas but a year, London already holds him in affectionate regard. W. N. U.

Major General Leonard Wood, possible Presidential candidate, snapped at his desk at army headquarters in Gary, Ind., where he was called from the Omaha riots to take charge of the steel strike situation. International

An artistic photo of Princess Jean de Broglie, whose marriage to the Hon. Reginald A. Fellowes, grandson of the Duke of Marlborough, recently took place in London. Mrs. Fellowes is the beautiful granddaughter of Mr. Singer, of sewing machine fame. International

A late photograph of General Lord E. H. H. Allenby and Lady Allenby. London recently welcomed home the commander in chief of the victorious British forces in Palestine, acclaiming him the "last of the Crusaders" in honor of his deliverance of the Holy City from the hands of the Turks. Lord Allenby became prominent in British military circles during the South African War through his training of the Matabeleland relief forces. Since his return to England he has been appointed British High Commissioner for Egypt and the Sudan, succeeding General Sir E. Reginald Wingate. International

The bracing air of the Yosemite National Park made His Majesty King Albert of the Belgians feel so good that he just had to kick up his heels when he had climbed to the top of Overhanging Rock to view the canyon thousands of feet below. International

A tribute to the automobile engine's great part in winning the war. A monument called "The Victory of the Automobile," which has been erected in Paris before the Grand Palace, takes the form of a whippet tank supported on either side by British lions and surmounted by the winged statue of Victory. A youthful torchbearer lights the way for the tank's progress. Press Illustrating
