The Washing Machine With a Pump

ELECTRIC CLOTHES WASHER
Mechanically Correct

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

The BERKSHIRE WASHING MACHINE is so constructed that belts, springs, reversing gears and other intricate parts, which are apt to get out of order, have been eliminated. As a result, the BERKSHIRE operates without vibration and in SILENCE.

The tub is octagonal in shape, suspended from opposite corners and rotates in one direction, raising and dropping the clothes into the hot sudsy water four distinct times during each revolution.

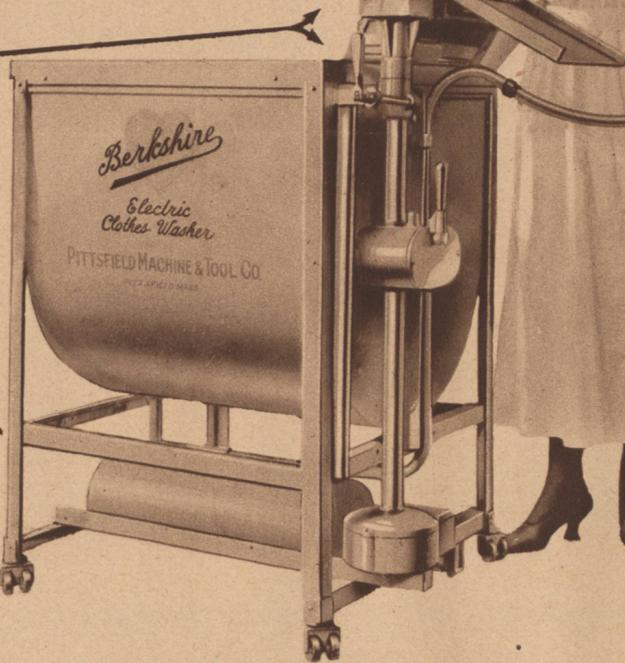

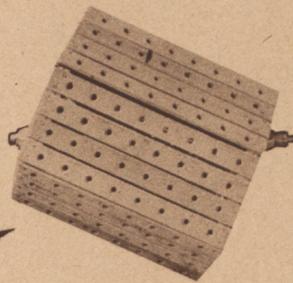

The entire operation is controlled from one position by means of control levers conveniently located at one corner of the washer.

There are no bright metal or white enamel surfaces to polish. The BERKSHIRE is finished in a durable battle-ship gray, easily wiped clean.

The mechanical parts are completely enclosed. Simple connection with any electric socket is all that is necessary for operation.

The BERKSHIRE rolls on universal casters, allowing movement in any direction. The washer can be easily pushed about.

The BERKSHIRE CLOTHES WASHER is designed and constructed by the Pittsfield Machine & Tool Co., an organization skilled in manufacturing instruments of precision for many years. This knowledge and workmanship have developed a washing machine unsurpassed in simplicity, durability and efficiency.

The Pump

This is the only washing machine manufactured that pumps the water out after use. Simply turn a lever and the small, motor-connected pump empties the washer without further attention. This exclusive feature of the BERKSHIRE obviates the disagreeable operation of emptying the washer by hand.

The Wringer

The slanting wringer is another exclusive feature of the BERKSHIRE. Just drop the clothes on the lower roller where they are immediately and automatically sent through the wringer without danger of the operator's fingers coming in contact with the rollers. The wringer can be slanted or swung into any position desired, or can be removed, thus making a table out of the washer.
