Patriarchal Form of Society and No Attention Paid to the Outside World.

Scattered throughout the States of Indiana, Ohio and Michigan is a sect of people who have banded themselves together in an organization known as the "Evening Light."

It is seldom found that any family lives isolated or very far from any other family, but all live in well established communities.

Members of the "Evening Light" are easily distinguished on account of the peculiar clothing they wear.

A peculiarity of the females is that they always wear small white caps underneath their bonnets.

WOMEN IN THE WAR.

"We will now hear the report of Miss Emma Mache," said Mrs. Ralph Trautman from the chair.

It was during the dull routine of the Women's Patriotic Association meeting yesterday morning.

"We went down to the Nahant ourselves and gave the things to the boys that are fighting for us. We wanted to help 'em, you see. Oh, we gave 'em lots of things—fruit and cakes and candies, and oil—condensed milk! And they put the condensed milk on their strawberries! And—that's all—'n't it, Lizzie?"

The meeting was a routine one no longer. Something had happened out of the regular order. The reporting member of the Women's Patriotic Association was only five years old.

Emma is a "Little Mother." She belongs to that army of children who stop at their homes during their vacation hours to knit and sew and mend the babies while their mothers are earning pennies for bread.

"You see, we are all employed all day in the big stores, so we haven't much time either. Our club has twenty-four members and we sewed regularly for many nights until we had made eighteen comforters, thirty-six bandages for the naval reserves and twenty-two dozen bandages which we sent to Washington."

"Friday is our club night," she said, "and we thought we ought to do something for our country instead of just enjoying ourselves—as we worked."

Our club has twenty-four members and we sewed regularly for many nights until we had made eighteen comforters, thirty-six bandages for the naval reserves and twenty-two dozen bandages which we sent to Washington."

"Oh, you got used to it," answered Miss Bannan. "And we weren't any of us tired when we saw the pleasure we gave to the sailors of the Nahant."

Last Saturday, on their half holiday, this party of young patriots went down with their comfort bags, their bandages and their delicacies to present them to the sailors of the Nahant. But the Nahant was cooling and they couldn't go aboard.

"It is even more pitiful," she said. "A young woman, twenty-two, is expecting her first baby. Her husband, the only support of six people, has been killed in the war."

"Ladies, what shall we do?" asked Mrs. Trautman from the chair.

"Here's ten dollars to begin on," said Miss Bannan. "Several soldiers' families have been asked to do this by a large and generous subscription list."

The association is now engaged, through Mrs. Nethrup and Miss Guernsey, in searching for an empty basement or floor from which to distribute supplies.

Some of the lucky fishermen at the Way, Way, Yonder Club have signified their desire to send their catches to town for the benefit of soldiers' families as soon as they know where their catches will be welcome.

It was reported at the meeting yesterday morning that seventeen people are enjoying the hospitality of Marion Cottage, the home placed at their disposal by the Red Cross in the Carnegie Building is to be given early in September, under the auspices of the German auxiliary.

MRS. CHARLES CARROLL, chairman of the Richmond Borough at Staten Island, reported the receipt of $500 from Hollis & Co. to be placed toward the purchasing of an ice machine for the Yanker.

"I am also reporting for shower baths," said Mrs. Carroll. "The mess boys don't know what a 'fresh water' feels like."

The Lady of the Yanker is Mrs. Carroll's pseudonym, throughout Tompkinsville. Her beneficence toward the sailors has been endless. She has sent them jars of marmalade, cans of soup, boxes of ginger ale, watermelons, jams, preserves, beans, caramels, pies, sugar, chocolate and twenty dozen sandwiches.

THE party of thirty-five nurses who were to have sailed from Tampa on the transport Lompasa last Monday are still at that city.

On Wednesday Dr. C. R. Gill, who is in charge of the party, telegraphed the Secretary of War for instructions, and also that permission be given to the Red Cross by the War Department to sail on the Government transport.

Yesterday morning this reply was received from Assistant Secretary of War Melchior: "The Surgeon-General of the army advises me that the services of all the nurses awaiting instructions."

There are now sixty nurses at Tampa. It was intended that twenty-five of them should remain there, subject to the call of the War Department.

MRS. J. A. T. HULL, the wife of Congressman Hull, and Mrs. Tanner, the wife of Corporal Tanner, were sent by the Washington Red Cross yesterday to Fort Monroe, Va., to open headquarters there. They have offered the Government the services of the nurses and supplies there.

SEVENTY-FIVE nurses are at Tampa and in the field and forty more are ready to go.

This was reported yesterday by the Red Cross Society for the Maintenance of Trained Nurses. It has in its treasury now about $30,000.

It is completed that the Government is making no calls for Red Cross nurses and even retaining their transportation does not seem to deter the society in its desire to maintain them.

It was a busy day at the Red Cross depot yesterday. The Atlas Line steamship routing to Kingston, Jamaica, sailing to-day, has assigned to carry Red Cross supplies.

Mrs. Robert Carroll, Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt, Mrs. Alexander Lambert, Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Richard Hoffman marked and packed suits of underwear, abdominal pads, pillow cases, canned soups, fruit, lime juice, preserves, etc., ten cases in all.

PERFECTED LEASE WITH WRONG MAN.

Levin and Shapero Pay $250 to a Smooth-Talking Young Swindler.

Isaac Levin and Julius Shapero, of No. 21 Hester street, made partial arrangements a few days ago with Isidor Goodstein for the lease of the latter's store in Hester street, near the Bowery, paying $50 to bind the contract.

At Ritter's office they met a young man, who said: "My father, Isidor Goodstein, is too old to do the business, and I must make the lease."

Suspecting nothing, the lessees paid $250, got their lease and left. When they went to take possession of the store they learned they had been swindled.

An examination of the lease showed that the supposed signature of "Isidor Goodstein," written in Hebrew, was found to read "Is it Goodstein." When they realized their loss the two men raved and swore. After a day or two they regained their composure, they declared they would cause Lawyer Ritter's arrest. The other man had fled.

The Magistrate in the Centre Street Court yesterday returned the case for a writ to give the men a chance to prepare their evidence. Ritter says he was merely engaged "to read" Goodstein to draw up the papers.
